A PRISON MAGAZINE SUGGESTS REMEDIES

Tells of Remedies for the Evils Pointed Out in American Prison Systems.

A subscriber way back in Philadelphia complains that we point out the evils of the American prison system without giving a remedy. There is no complete remedy for crime itself, that could be taken up without an overthrow of present social conditions, for there will always be someone who will commit crime. But crime may be reduced to a minimum, first by prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors and drugs; second, by humane treatment of the convict already in durance vile, and third, by educating that convict to the fact that his time is worth more to himself and the world at large if he follows an honest avocation. Then help him fit himself to meet the requirements. Every man inside if he has an atom of self-respect can broaden and expand, but he usually needs someone to show him. A great many of our number are illiterate; give them some sort of an education during their stay in prison. When they leave they will be better fitted to cope with the world and make an honest living. Very few men with even a reasonable amount of "book larnin'" are confined in penitentiaries; the smart man keeps out. Someone has asked if teaching men trades is not an education. No, it is not; for the way trades are taught in prison gives a man a very poor idea of how to do a certain thing in his line. I have met no small number of men who are "prison taught," and I have yet to find the first one who really could make good. They learn a trade after a fashion, but are unable to hold a job on the outside, so they become discouraged and go back to crime. Two years ago we had a school for a short time, but as no provision had been made by the state for the purchase of books, it was not a success. At the same time it was really wonderful how many of the inmates were reaching out for that something they had missed in their youth. To this day it is an unusual sight to see a school book of some description sticking out of the pocket of an inmate, and when opportunity affords, he will button-hole someone with, "say, cully, put me wise to dis word, will yuh?" It is common, very common here. Mail restrictions as practiced in most prisons is a fearful crime. In these places letters and newspapers of any value are cut off almost entirely, for some barbaric reason. Just think for a moment of how much your own education and knowledge of life would be impaired if you were cut off from the outside world for years. How would you expect to meet the battle when once more forced out in the thick of it, knowing nothing of the days of the world? Of the evils pointed out in previous articles, the remedy is also made clear. The great trouble is, if you talk to the public about something it already knows, you have not attracted attention. Just talk about something of which the public is ignorant, you are thought to be a crank, or a liar, or without a doubt 75 per cent of this human scrap heap can be culled over and made into new; with liquor abolished, that per centage could be increased to 90 in one generation, from that time on, degeneracy would die a natural death, and the prison population would be decreased to a fraction. Liquor breeds degeneracy and begets poverty; poverty begets crime, and there is no county blotter in the country but what will tell you the same story.

HAROLD HENWOOD TO HANG IN OCTOBER

Denver, Colo., July 8.—The state supreme court today confirmed the conviction of Harold Henwood of first degree murder and set the hanging for the week beginning October 23. Henwood's only chance now is for the governor to commute his sentence. Henwood shot and killed Sylvester Von Phul, a St. Louis millionaire, in the Brown Palace Hotel bar on the night of May 24, 1912, as a result of a quarrel over the affections of Mrs. John Springer, a society woman. One of the bullets from Henwood's revolver also struck and killed George Copeland, a bystander. Henwood was convicted on the Copeland charge.

DAVID STARR JORDAN IS CERTAIN TO WIN

Make Hot Fight Over Old Title—Wise Old Guys Discuss Education Between Scraps for Official Position.

St. Paul, Minn., July 8.—Professor David Starr Jordan's election as president of the National Educational association, in session here, was a certainty today, though the actual ballot will not be taken until Thursday. It was also stated positively that there would be no opposition to Oakland, Cal., for next year's meeting place. It had been decided to hold the 1915 convention in August, but the exact date remained to be determined. Professor Jordan's election to the presidency seemed unlikely as late as yesterday. He had said he would not be a candidate if there was opposition to him, and inasmuch as supporters of Dr. David B. Johnson of Rockhill, S. C., were making an extremely active campaign, this announcement by the Stanford university professor was generally taken as an equivalent to a withdrawal.

Tap the Wood Pendants. Late yesterday, however, following a conference of his backers, Dr. Johnson unexpectedly gave out word that he was out of the race, leaving Professor Jordan alone in the field. His election will be unanimous.

The outcome was considered a very fortunate one to what had threatened to develop into a somewhat acrimonious controversy between followers of the two candidates. Principal R. I. Short of the Cleveland West high school lectured today on technical education. Physical Director Annie Skeels of the Massachusetts Normal school, another of the day's speakers, urged a closer study of hygiene and physical training in the schools.

"Movies" were also discussed at a special meeting devoted to that subject, the speakers agreeing that moving picture theaters were destined to revolutionize educational methods.

A resolution was pending today, which, if adopted, will commit the association to an expression of disapproval of the Sage and Carnegie foundations, of the various Rockefeller boards and of similar organizations as tending to injure small schools.

GLENN PURVINE HAS BOTH ARMS BROKEN

Glenn Purvine of 1009 Fifth and E streets, met with an accident yesterday afternoon in which the bones of both fore arms were broken near the wrists. The boy, who is 15 years old, in company with his friend Glenn Gregg, was on a berry picking trip a mile above the carline on Liberty street. The front wheel of his bicycle caught in a rut in the road and he was thrown hard. A conveyance was sent for and he was taken to Dr. Fischer's offices where the bones were set. He is resting easily today.

HE BROKE INTO SONG.

Propos of the recent Chautauquus when St. Platt Jones so ably gave and reading "The Boy who Whistled Out of Tune", comes the humorous bit from the National monthly: The red-haired office boy was whistling a late popular air, but he didn't carry the tune very well. "You will break into song occasionally, will you?" remarked his employer. "Sometimes," answered the surnamed haired youth. "If you'd get the key you wouldn't need to break in," retorted the boss.

OF INTEREST TO SALEM ART LOVERS

Of interest to Salem art lovers is the news that plans have already been made for class work at the Portland Art Museum next year. The Spectator says: "With the news that Henry Frederick Wentz will take a half year's leave of absence, comes the announcement that Sydney Bell, the portrait painter, has been appointed in his place for the first semester. Mr. Bell only recently arrived in Portland, but a few art lovers have had the opportunity of seeing the excellence of his portraits. He studied at the Royal College of Art, England, under Professor Moira, and held the local scholarship for three years. He was the cartoonist for "Vanity Fair," and tutor at Ladies College, Chittenden, England. Mr. Bell is a particularly good draughtsman, and will take the advanced classes in life and portrait for the first semester. Miss Helen Putnam, of Chicago, has been appointed to take Miss Mary Horne Webster's place, and will have the elementary classes and design. Mr. Bell's work has been done at the Chicago Art Institute, and in design she is especially excellent. Mr. Wentz will return in time to resume his work in the second semester.
