DELAY IN CANCER.

In the present state of knowledge the chief hope of reducing the cancer death rate is found in early recogni-tion of the disease, followed by prompt and competent surgical treatment Thousands of lives now needlessly sac-rificed could be saved if the average cancer patient would go to the sur geon as promptly as does the average person attacked by appendicitis. Not is there any reason why the cancer pa tient should not seek this, the only safe treatment, with the same high de gree of confidence in the outcome that is now common among those suffering from the latter disease. Unfortunately the evidence is only too clear that different attitude towards cancer p vnils and occasions many preventable deaths. The almost superstition dread of the disease and unwillingne to admit its existence or to seek medi cal advice in time are well-known an difficult obstacles to progress in its control. Proof of this fatal neglect is found in the experience of a New York surgeon who recently studied his case records in order to obtain definite in formation as to the delay in the averand patients there were 86 cases of enneer. Sixty-five of these had never been operated on, and came to him as new cases. Of the 65 patients, 35 were men and 30 were women. Further study of these 65 cases showed that after the first discovery of a tumor, or after the first suspicious symptoms the men had waited an average of 12.2 menths before consulting the surgeon, and the women had wnited 11.9 months; practically a year's delay in all cases. Another well-known surgeon in a recent public address confirmed this estimate from his own experience Winter of Koenigsburg, Prussia, the pioceer in the education of the public in regard to cancer, analyzed the records of 1062 operatable cases and show-for which the patient is responsible, we find that the average patient does not seek ndvice until at least a year and a half after the onset of cancer. This precious time thrown away means, if not a fatal outcome, at least a seriious instead of a minor operation, Science has not yet found the cause of cancer. It is not known how it is contracted or how it is transmitted from one patient to another. We do not know how to prevent it. Some day we will know. Meanwhile, cancer is increasing rapidly. The best advice and the only advice that can be given to the public, with our present knowledge, is, to have every suspicious sore or lump removed and removed early .-Journal American Medical Association.
