Oregon's Famous Summer Resorts

Newport, Cool and Breezy, Draws Visitors From Cities

LAMAR TOOZE.

As the Fourth of July is generally considered by Newporters to mark the beginning, likewise the middle of August is thought to be the high water mark of the summer season in Newport. The next two weeks will see the height of the season's passenger tide. At the present time it is variously estimated that there are between 6,000 and 8,000 people sojourning here. Nearly every city in Oregon, as well as many cities in other states, are represented in the large summer population which is enjoying the sun-bathing, agate hunting and the many other equally attractive diversions of Newport.

As last year showed a marked increase over the preceding year in the number of beach visitors, this season, so far, has eclipsed the record of last year. There are more people in Newport than ever before.

A noticeable difference in this season, over any previous, is the fact that it bids fair to last at least two weeks longer than any other year. A considerable number of cottages and tents have been rented until September 1 or after. Heretofore, the last week in August has practically marked the end of the season.

Principally responsible for the larger number of people here and also the extension of the season, has been the great improvement of the tent, cottage and hotel accommodations. During the past year, cottages and tents have fairly gone up by the hundreds while several hotels have been opened.

"Permanency" is the word that aptly characterizes the Newport of today.

In honor of Miss Vivian Greer, of Ashland, Mrs. Chester Stevenson, also of Ashland, gave a delightful dancing party Saturday evening at the Hotel Nicolai ballroom. Light refreshments were served. MURDER DONE AT PAULINA.
(Harney County News.)

A murder was committed at Paulina last Friday, both parties to which are well known in Burns. The slayer is Henry McDowell, a curly-haired young man who drove the Prineville stage into Burns for some time, who shot and killed A. G. Scroggins, the contractor on that mail route, for whom McDowell was working and at whose home he was living. Scroggins had been to Portland and returned sooner than he was expected. In coming through Prineville it is said he made threats against the life of McDowell and after reaching home he continued such hostile expressions and along in the night he arose twice with threats of killing McDowell and his wife also, but she succeeded in pacifying him and inducing him to return to bed. McDowell slept in an adjoining room and heard the talk, so next morning he walked into the dining room where Scroggins was at the table and said to the latter, "So you propose to kill me, do you?" to which Scroggins answered "Yes," whereupon McDowell pulled a revolver and shot him. McDowell telephoned for the sheriff and coroner, a jury was impaneled and rendered a verdict that McDowell had committed murder, so he was taken to jail at Prineville. Contrary to general first impressions, a man who knows all parties to this unfortunate case informs the News that there is nothing of jealousy in it.
