GOVERNOR MAY CLOSE THE HUNTING SEASON

Unless the famous Wolffoot skies drop a shower within the next few days, the continued drought may result in a proclamation of the governor closing the hunting season until rain comes. Numerous fires have started since the hunting season opened, and though they are under control by the fire warden, the forests are so dry now that a fire might cause immense damage. A number of complaints have been received by the governor, and requests that the hunting season be closed, but he has also received a number of remonstrances from hunters protesting against the closing of the open season.
