PART III. OF CREATION

Part III. begins with the time of at the Grand Opera House. Daniel and concludes with the death and resurrection of Jesus. Grasping the history and Bible narrative, this third part of the drama cannot fail to be absolutely interesting. The manager assures us that such be absolutely interesting. The manager inflicted heavy losses on the Britons, assures us that such expectations are it was announced today by the war of-quite proper and will be amply ful-fice here.

they were mistaken. No solicitation of money, directly or indirectly, is being ande. As was originally stated by the management, the drama is a public benefaction brought to our city at great expense and being supported here in large part by citizens of public spirit whose names are not even mentioned, who delight merely to do good and seek no carthly reward for it, except that which comes from a satisfaction of heart and from the progress of the blessing to others.

A lady visiting the drama remarked how well the speaker's voice kept up and he did not even seem to become exhausted or to take a rest. She was not aware that these grand lectures are produced by mechanism, "canned oratory," as somebody has styled it. Indeed, the photo diama of Creation people seem to have gotten hold of some special combination whereby their lectures are produced with an efficiency, volume and clearness of tone before achieved. Phonograph people are surprised and perplexed and wondering. The drama people say that they are willing to by and by give away their secret, but that for the time being they hold a little monopoly in the interest of the drama. Nothing of the horny or metallis sound is to be noted. Every syllable comes out clear, full, round, and never a blunder is We are surely justified in say ing that no orator ever spoke so flu-ently and distinctly from any platform anywhere, as is done by this wonderful
