BOTH THE INNES ARE ADMITTED TO BAIL

San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 16.—Victor E. Innes and Mrs. Innes, who were arrested several weeks ago near Eugene, Or., in connection with the disappearance of Miss Beatrice Nelms and Mrs. Eloise Nelms-Dennis, sisters of Atlanta, Ga., expected to secure their release on bail today. An order admitting the couple, who are charged with murder, to bail was issued by the court yesterday upon the recommendation of District Attorney Gilden. The sum fixed was $1,000 in each of the four cases against Innes and $500 in each of the four cases against Mrs. Innes.

Up to noon today Innes and his wife were still in jail, unable to obtain bonds.

Marshall Nelms, a brother of the alleged victims, today faced a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The authorities discovered yesterday during the hearing of the district attorney's recommendation to admit the Innes to bail that Nelms was armed.

During the progress of the hearing, Mrs. Nelms, mother of the missing women, turned to Innes and cried: "You shall suffer for all the misery you have caused me."

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTED TO MIX IT

Levinsky's Bashfulness Responsible for the Fiasco in the Recent Meet

By Hal Sheridan.
New York, Oct. 16.—Reports sent out to various parts of the country that flailing Levinsky, hotel Gunboat Smith in their recent 10-round battle here are not borne out by the accounts of the contest printed in New York papers. In his article on the fight, Sporting Editor Bob Edgren of the Evening World said:

"It was not Smith's fault that the bout was the flattest, most tiresome affair on a perspiring public. Neither was it any fault of the promoters. The whole trouble was that Levinsky was scared half out of his wits in the first round.

"Gunboat Smith was more than willing—he was actually anxious to mingle with Mr. Levinsky and rattle his chain and rap him in the shins. The unwillingness was all on Mr. Levinsky's part and it was such a consistent unwillingness that he was able to stall, to bug and hold and dance endlessly and feint and jump away until ten rounds were over. For which he received great applause from his following. This same following, by the way, hissed vigorously whenever Smith managed to unbalance his long arms from Levinsky's and clip him one before he could get out of range.

"At various intervals Levinsky attacked, jabbing rapidly or reaching for Smith's body with a swinging right, but he was so anxious to keep out of range that nine blows out of ten fell short.

"Many of the spectators thought the affair was a farce. To me it looked about as described above. Smith did whatever fighting was done—which was not a great deal—and held his lead through all the ten rounds. He landed many more blows than Levinsky—at least two for one. Levinsky started a theatrical sort of rally in the tenth, flailing himself chest to chest against the gunner, where neither man could possibly strike an effective blow, and tapping rapidly with both hands.

"Saylor a Dead One.
San Francisco, Oct. 16.—Local fight fans who looked over Milburn Saylor's changes in his 20-round bout last night at Daly City with Eddie Mey were convinced today that if Saylor ever defeated Freddie Welsh, as he claims, Welsh must have been asleep, blindfolded and bound hand and foot. Saylor went 20 extremely slow rounds with Mey to a draw. If he had anything that entitled him to rate with first string lightweights he kept it carefully concealed.

"Saylor's attack consists mainly of a round house swing and a right uppercut. He missed the swing about nine times out of ten, and was never sure where his opponent was going. He landed the swing several times on the point of Mey's chin, but if it had any force back of it, Mey is a bear for punishment. He was not in distress at any time. Mey, too, was absolutely lacking

SOME FIGURES ON OREGON MANUFACTURES

Reports from a total of 4504 mercantile, manufacturing and miscellaneous trade, business and professional firms and establishments of the state, from which data is obtained for the report of State Labor Commissioner Hoff for the biennial period 1913-1914, show that during the year 1913 these combined industrial institutions gave employment to an aggregate of 22,250 people in various capacities from managers down to common laborers, and paid out wages and salaries for the year a total of $15,242,820. These figures do not cover all of the separate industries of the state, for there were hundreds of them which made partial reports to the labor bureau which did not give all of the data required, and these were not included in the tabulation from which the above statistics were obtained.

When a widow tries to flirt with a married man all the other women in town are anxious to drop in and sympathize with his wife.

Some people thirst for knowledge, even if it is dry.

In any kind of a punch, the bout was one of the poorest staged at Daly City in years.

Red Watson stopped Dick Hyland in the 15th round of a scheduled twenty-round bout. In the twelfth Watson upset the veteran with a right cross to the jaw, the bell saving him from a knockout. Hyland came up tired and weak for the thirteenth, and after Watson had landed hard left and right to Dick's head he begged in vain for Referee Jim Griffin to stop the bout. Watson then sailed in again and put Hyland down and out. Griffin then called a halt. Watson picked up his fallen adversary and carried him in his corner.

Ray Olmstead and Jim Horner boxed four rounds to a draw in the only preliminary bout of the evening.

Back From Australia.

San Francisco, Oct. 16.—Three more American boxers have returned from Australia and are seeking matches in San Francisco. They are Eddie McGorrie, the middleweight of Oskosh, Wis., and Joe Shagrus and Bobby Moore, New York lightweights.

McGorrie plans to leave tomorrow for his home, but said he would like to return here and meet the winner of the Jimmy Clabby-George Chip bout. McGorrie declared that he engaged in eight bouts in Australia and won seven of them, suffering his only setback on a foul to Clabby. Shagrus and Moore will remain in San Francisco in the hope of getting on in the local game.

KING AT SANDRINGHAM

London, Oct. 16.—King George, Queen Mary and their children, with the exception of the Prince of Wales, were at Sandringham today.

Though it was not definitely so stated, it was generally understood that the transfer from Buckingham to Sandringham palace was due to the government's opinion that the latter would be a safer place in the event of a German Zeppelin raid.

The Prince of Wales, in his capacity as an army officer, remained in London.

WILLAMETTE PLAYS O. A. C. TOMORROW

The Willamette University football team is meeting today preparatory to the big contest at O. A. C. tomorrow, when they are scheduled to face Dr. Stewart's husky Beavers.

Having given up hope of being able to wrest victory from the defenders of the orange and black, the local team is going into the game to hold down the score as much as possible, and each with the individual resolution to put up the fight of his life against the Corvallis team.

Although the team is somewhat weaker than those that have represented the university in recent years, they still retain the old fighting spirit and gameness of their predecessors and will put up a good sportsmanlike scrap.

The entire university student body is right behind the team and boosting them. A special excursion leaving at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning will take all the students that can possibly get away from their work to Corvallis to support the team. A one-way fare has been secured for the round trip and many of the townspeople and high school students are planning to take advantage of the rates and see the game.

A rally will be held on the university campus this evening with a big bonfire on the athletic field. The freshmen have been working industriously this afternoon preparing the bonfire, auto trucks hauling boxes and barrels from all over the city.

CAUSED A CHANGE IN ORDER OF NAMES

Owing to a slight misinterpretation of the law regarding the manner of naming of candidates upon the official ballots for the general election, and especially the candidates for judges of the supreme court, it was necessary for the style of ballot to be changed in this respect in order that the several candidates for the four vacancies to be filled be arranged in alphabetical order by names rather than by political party designation.

The mistake was discovered early enough to make the correction before the ballots were printed, hence no additional expense was incurred.

The ballots sent out by Secretary Olcott to the county clerks were arranged according to the dominant party rule, as is provided for federal and other state officers, with the republican party candidates first, the democratic second and Progressives third, in the order of party dominance. The mistake having been called to his attention by Judge Galloway, one of the democratic nominees, Secretary Olcott instructed the county clerks to alter the arrangement of candidates upon the ballot to conform to alphabetical rule.

The change in arrangement of candidates' names as they would have appeared under the party designation plan and is shown by the following:

Political party designation:
Republican party candidates—Bean, Hanson, Harris, Melville.
Democratic party candidates—Crawford, Galloway, Ramsey, Slater.
Prohibition party candidates—Bright, Socialist party candidates—Hotchkiss, Otten, Robinson.
By alphabetical arrangement, regardless of party—Bean, Benson, Bright, Crawford, Galloway, Harris, Hotchkiss, Melville, Otten, Ramsey, Robinson and Slater.

VILLISTAS QUIT

Mexico City, Oct. 16.—Owing to the more peaceful aspect of the Mexican situation, it was learned today that the force of Villistas who recently sailed from Guaymas to undertake the conquest of Lower California, had abandoned their campaign. It was said a small force would remain to police Santa Rosalia and the rest would return to Guaymas.

CORRESPONDENT'S EXPERENCES

general said, was seven miles away—entirely too far to walk.

"Oh, we have a car," we explained cheerfully.

"But I've requisitioned it," answered the general. "Captain, will you escort the gentleman out?"

The Captain Did.

The captain would and did. He escorted us out and also in.

Imagine a village without even a railroad station, a village consisting of a government tobacco shop, three farm houses and several cow sheds, and you've got the scene of our arrest.

Imagine also one of the farm houses built of stone in a "U" shape, with a stone fence across the top of the "U," and you will have likewise an idea of the place of our imprisonment.

Add to this, in the inside of the "U" a tableland of hay and stable racks, the whole thing very wet and smelly under the cold drizzle, and your sketch will be practically complete.

Through a gate in the stone wall our smiling captain conducted us. On the right was a door leading into the colonel's quarters. At the back, across the fertilizer plateau, were two more doors, through one of which I spied two cows, one lying down and chewing her cud and the other standing.

The second door was also open.

It was labeled in chalk: "Prison."

Next, Cows' Bedchamber.

The captain ushered us in. Our quarters were identical with the cows' bedchamber. German prisoners, French deserters, spies, and pillagers stood or lay about on the hay which covered the floor.

They put us on our parole not to run away. They took our word for it that we would not run away, but they also stationed a sentry at the gate with orders to shoot if we gave any indications of absentmindedness concerning our promise.

They were very, very polite and kind about it, assuring us over and over that we were prisoners—prisoners being entitled to rations, which we were not. And a kick concerning our quarters finally did actually get us an empty hay lot, where the proper use of money also secured us a few bundles of hay to sleep on.

The Lid Is On.

The morning of the second day our car was returned to us, an armed guard accompanying us back to Paris. Arriving late in the evening, we dined in the corridor of the Cherche-Midi military prison. We narrowly missed sleeping there, too, but between midnight and morning some mysterious influence shifted us to the invalids, where we had officers' beds the rest of the night. Then we were released.
