The House of Quality Meyers GOOD GOODS Salem's Style Store

Blanchard, the caretaker of the Electric bowling alleys, bowled the high score of 261 in competition last night on the Electric alleys. This is the high score of the year for the city. Blanchard is not a member of the regular Electric team on account of his employment in the alleys. He led off with six straight strikes, got two spares and then finished with three strikes.

For sale—damaged wheat, oats and barley. 406-7 Hubbard bldg.

There was no case in the circuit court this afternoon and the court was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, at which time Judge Kelly will impose sentence on Andrew J. Anderson, who was convicted of a statutory crime against his 13-year-old daughter. The sentence for conviction on this charge may be from 20 years to life imprisonment.

R. A. Booth, republican candidate for senator, will address the people of Salem at the Grand Theatre Saturday night.

The case of V. A. Vincent against the Black Eagle Milling and Mining company was rushed through the circuit court this morning. This was an action brought to recover money and the jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $457.37 with interest at 8 per cent and an additional $75 for attorney's fees.

Hear R. A. Booth, at the Grand Theatre, Saturday night. Everybody invited.

Free piano at Appleby's store about November 1. Come in and have us explain this wonderful free offer. We are going to give away a $400 piano to one of our customers. Watch our advertisements in The Journal, and be sure to ask about the free piano when you come to the store. C. M. Appleby, grocer and baking powder manufacturer, State and Nineteenth.

At yesterday's meeting of the North Salem Woman's Club a petition was originated which will be circulated among the residents of the northern part of the city, later to be submitted to the city council, to secure sign posts for erection on the streets which have recently been changed in name in that section of Salem. The street formerly known as North Sixth is now North Church, being an irregular continuation of that street. The street for years known as Broadway, which is really North High street, will henceforth be registered as such. The other change is in North Fifth street, which is to be called Rose avenue.

Hon. T. J. Lafsky, Salem's old-time citizen and councilman, who is now the business manager for the city of LaGrande under its commission form of government, is in the city on business, disposing of his lands and slaking lands with old friends. He has had charge of LaGrande's business affairs for nearly a year, beginning his work December 1, 1913. He is much pleased with this form of government, and says that under it in 11 months LaGrande has reduced her indebtedness from $110,000 to $57,000, and in April will be out of debt. Asked about politics up his way, he smiled and answered that people disagreed about it and the situation was largely guess work. He thought Chamberlain and Wilkerson were rather favorites in his county, and that Chamberlain seemed to be pretty strong in the Columbia river counties of eastern Oregon. He visited his sons in Corvallis yesterday and will probably return to LaGrande tomorrow.

All of the counties containing railroad land involved in the suit now pending in the U. S. district court between the government and the Southern Pacific company will be treated alike, according to the statement of one of the tax and right-of-way men who called upon County Assessor Ben West this morning. The men appeared before the tax equalization boards of the other counties of the valley and in each instance the proposition of the railroad company board. The railroad company board. The railroad company board. The railroad company board.

John A. Jeffreys, democratic candidate for attorney general, was in the city yesterday, en route to his home in Portland. He has visited every county in the state and feels that his chance of election is as good as even one. Mr. Jeffreys is well known in Salem, having practiced law here for a number of years.

R. A. Booth will discuss the issues of the campaign at the Grand Theatre Saturday night. Come and hear him.

Myrtle Gillis, who was arrested yesterday but released upon bonds of $50, appeared in police court this morning and took the 24 hours allowed to plead to a charge of selling whiskey. It is alleged in the complaint that she sold a bottle of whiskey to Lane Minamy in a rooming house in this city.

BUSINESS SITUATION STEADILY IMPROVES

Trade With Other Countries Shows Important and Steady Gains

Washington, Oct. 16.—The commercial situation throughout the entire country was referred to as "promising" by Secretary of Commerce Redfield today in a letter to Senator Simmons of North Carolina, chairman of the senate finance committee. While admitting that business had suffered from shock during the first few weeks of the European war, he declared both neutral and belligerent nations were now turning to America for supplies, principally textile products, shoes and iron.

"It is clear," wrote Secretary Redfield, "that our imports reached a low point the last of August. Since then, however, they have gone up again. The tendency now is for a heavy increase, and this, for obvious reasons, should be so. It may be expected that imports will not fall off anything like the full amount hitherto received from Germany and Austria. Our revenues from these sources probably will not be as sharply reduced as was thought probable at first."

Statistics of imports published today by the commerce department will be used by Secretary Redfield as democratic campaign material. The balance of trade shifted sharply in favor of America in September, according to the figures, exports during the month exceeding imports by $16,984,523, as compared with a surplus of imports of $19,400,356 during August, when the war situation in Europe was regarded as acute here.

Secretary Redfield declared the increased purchase abroad of American products was largely due to the reopening of foreign traffic lines, the new registration law and the war risk bureau. September imports were $139,204,267 as against $171,081,843 for September last year.

SOME STATISTICS ON FARM PRODUCTS

Labor Commissioner Hoff Compares Values of Farm Products in Report

State Labor Commissioner O. P. Hoff has compiled for use in his biennial report for the 1913-1914 period a complete list of the wholesale prices quoted in Portland, June 30 of this year, upon the principal household commodities, together with lists of wholesale prices for the same commodities for the corresponding periods for the past 10 years, in which it is shown that, with few exceptions, the wholesale prices of these commodities were but a trifle higher early in the year than they were 10 years ago and, in some instances, the wholesale prices were higher two years ago.

This would seem to indicate that the cause for the general complaint of the "high cost of living" is not attributable, to the first, or producers', price, nor to the wholesalers' price, but rather that the great increase in the cost of such products to the consumer is factored on between the wholesaler and the consumer. In other words, while the farmer does not receive any more today—and in many instances not so much—for his products than he did 10 years ago or two years ago, the retail market of today is far and away above the producers' and wholesalers' prices.

The most notable instances in which the wholesale prices of staple commodities have shown an increase over 10 and two years ago, respectively, are: Butter, creamery, which June 30, 1904, was quoted at 17 1/2 to 20 cents per pound; in 1912, 22 cents; and in 1914 at 27 to 27 1/2 cents. Store butter (country), in 1904 was 12 and 13 cents per pound; in 1912, 22 cents; and in 1914, 27 cents. Eggs in 1904 were quoted at 19 1/2 cents to 20 cents per dozen; in 1912, 25 cents; in 1914, 27 cents. Hogs, on foot, in 1904, brought $5 to $5.50 per hundred; in 1912, $7.25 to $7.50; in 1914, $7.35 to $8 per hundred. Hogs, dressed, were quoted at $6 to $7 in 1904, $10 to $10.50 in 1912, and $9.50 to $10 this year. Dressed veal was quoted at $5 to $7 in 1904, $13 in 1912, and $12.50 to $13 this year.

August 1, 1914, according to reports received in the department of Labor Commissioner Hoff, the prices paid to producers of farm products in Oregon were as follows: Hogs, $7.50 per hundred; beef cattle, $6.10 per hundred; sheep, $4.50 per hundred; milk cows, $8 per head; horses, $98 per head; and on September 1, 1914, the producer received 33 cents per pound for butter, 37 cents per dozen for eggs, 13 1/2 cents per pound for chickens, and $8.30 per hundred for veal calves.

The revival meetings at the Bungalow on Seventeenth street near Court are attracting good audiences and the interest is increasing daily. You will be pleased and entertained by the stirring sermons by Mr. Rossett. The subject tonight will be "The Providence of God," illustrated by the most interesting story of all time. His subject Sunday morning will be: "Elements of Success in Church Life," or "How to Hold Out Faithful." Sunday evening the subject will be, "Why Are There So Many Denominations?"
