

SALEM COMMERCIAL CLUB'S SPLENDID EXHIBIT

Geographically speaking, Salem is surrounded by Marion county. It is the hub about which revolves all manner of activities in a region where a second soil produces just about everything grown in the temperate zone, from the finest hops to the best cherries.

The display is for the most part one to feast the eye alone. All the magnificent specimens of fruit shown are in tall bottles and each luscious appearing peach or pear contains enough alcohol to make a shy retiring mouse tuck in a wildcat. Which is going some!

Lucubration, agriculture, horticulture, viticulture, dairying, livestock raising, are some of them. And wheat, oats, fruit, hops and hay are the principal crops. There is about 12,000 acres planted to hops in Marion county, the largest acreage in the state and the source of the finest quality hops grown in the world.

comes to fruits—a look at those big fellows of all kinds preserved in the bottles in the booth, is all that is needed to convince one of their infinite deliciousness and variety. Peaches, pears, apples, prunes, cherries, grapes and berries, are all shown and better still are grown commercially.
