Land Department REDUCES EXPENSES
State Has 614,131 Acres of School Lands But at Present Not in Demand

There is at least one department in the capitol building that is asking for, and will probably receive, a lesser appropriation for conducting the business of the office for the next biennium, and that is the state land department.

Clerk G. G. Brown, of the state land board, transacted his business with the board of control in less than five minutes yesterday afternoon when he went in and submitted his estimate for $18,000 to defray the expenses of the department for the next two years, which is $2000 less than has been asked and appropriated for the office for many years, and the board passed favorably upon it immediately.

The principal reason for the asking for a lower appropriation for the ensuing two-year period is that, because of the great falling off in the demand for and subsequent sale of state school land within the past year or two, there will be less need for clerical help, and Mr. Brown feels that he can get along with one less assistant in his department after the first of the year. This will mean a reduction of $200 in the amount required for salaries in the department.

Land High and Dry.
The falling off in the land sales in this department is not due to a shortage in the supply of school lands subject to sale, for the state has "oodles" of it. There is at present a total of 614,131 acres of school land open for sale throughout the state, but all of this land, except 7,170 acres, lies east of the Cascade mountains, and the greater portion of it is only subject to farming through irrigation or dry-farming methods, and much of it only fit for grazing purposes. Of the 606,960 acres of school land in eastern and central Oregon, 209,080 is in Harney county, 109,920 in Lake and 199,680 in Malheur counties, all of which, if suitable for agricultural purposes at all, is subject to irrigation or dry-farming.

* Wigt school land: exists in western Oregon is probably located in the rough and rugged mountain districts and not suited to agricultural purposes, with the possible exception of a little pocket occasionally in isolated sections and provided only with crude means of approach. The school lands of the state are distributed among the several counties, as follows:

Baker, 18,480; Benton, 530; Coos, 360; Curry, 940; Crook, 37,120; Douglas, 2,290; Gilliam, 3,720; Grant, 15,280; Harney, 209,080; Jackson, 1,100; Josephine, 1,500; Klamath, 9,140; Lake, 109,920; Lane, 200; Lincoln, 300; Malheur, 199,680; Morrow, 1,440; Sherman, 1,340; Tillamook, 160; Umatilla, 3,400; Union, 3,980; Walla, 3,540; Wasco, 3,080; Wheeler, 6,960; Yamhill, 90. Total, 614,131.

The state of Oregon have established a custom of providing State aid to privately conducted charitable institutions. Ten such institutions are now receiving State aid, four of which, at least, are distinctively sectarian. These four institutions the past four years received of public money $41,765.05. It is clearly a violation of the spirit, if not of the letter, of the State Constitution, and should be cut out. It is a bad custom the legislature has established, and one subject to all sorts of abuses.
