

The Daily Capital Journal

SALEM, OREGON

Home and Farm Magazine Section

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1914.

A "Breeder" of Wheat.

BREEDING cattle, horses, pigs and chickens is common enough, but how many farmers "breed" wheat? By breeding is really meant selection, and it is by this that the champion wheat grower of the world, pictured above, has captured his first prizes. Constant care and experimentation are necessary to secure the results that have brought Seager Wheeler of Roshera, Saskatchewan, Canada, fame as a wheat grower.

The grower is shown above standing in a field of wheat which has few equals in the world. It was a bushel of wheat from this field that won the first prize and sweepstakes at the recent International Soil Products Exhibition held in conjunction with the International Dry Farming Congress at Wichita, Kansas. From this field came the wheat that won against all the world in the Sir Thomas Shaughnessy $1,000 purse offer three years ago. This is done by "breeding" wheat.