

WILL H. PARRY IS ON COMMISSION

Important Position Is Given Seattle Newspaper Man By President Wilson

Washington, Jan. 20.—Will H. Parry, of Seattle, has been chosen by President Wilson as one of the members of the new federal trade commission...

Parry An Active Man. Seattle, Wash., Jan. 20.—Will H. Parry, chosen today by President Wilson to be one of five members of the new federal trade commission...

The federal trade commission will have complete control of the regulation of big business throughout the country, regulating unfair methods of competition and preventing the control of properties through interlocking directorates.

Its members are appointed for a term of seven years. The salary of each member is $10,000 a year.

(Will H. Parry will be remembered by old-timers in Salem, having been city editor of the Capital Journal, before the Hofer Bros. became owners of the paper.)

WOMAN PRESIDES OVER ARIZONA SENATE TODAY

As Soon As She Secures Gavel Request to Get Down to Business Is Made and Work Follows.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 20.—For the first time in history, it is believed, a woman presided today over the deliberations of a state legislature.

Mrs. Frances Munds, a senator from Yavapai county, served as president of the senate when she was called to the chair by President Sims.

"I won't waste time in thanking you," said Mrs. Munds as she seated herself and grasped the gavel. "Let's get down to business."

Several bills were rushed through the senate, which was sitting as a committee of the whole. Then Mrs. Munds took time to reproach a senator who addressed her as "Mr. President."

"Madam President would better sit the chair," she corrected, with dignity. The senator bowed gravely and accepted her amendment.

"Now, gentlemen, lets keep going; there is much to be done," Mrs. Munds reminded the senate, and business was resumed.

However, the average man doesn't realize how lucky he is when a woman refuses to marry him.

COURTESY APPRECIATED.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—Clearing that burglars would blow up his brand new safe, S. Y. Kelsner, a merchant here, hung a sign upon it last night which read: "Save your dynamite; the safe isn't locked."

A burglar happened along during the night. He easily opened the door and stole $28. Departing, he penciled below Kelsner's notice: "Your courtesy appreciated."

Bring Worker and Job Together, Says J. Schiff

New York, Jan. 20.—"The government must bring the worker and the job together," J. Schiff said today.

This is the only solution of the unemployment problem, in the opinion of Jacob H. Schiff, millionaire banker, who testified today before the federal industrial relations commission's investigation here of the Rockefeller, Sage, Carnegie and other foundations.

Schiff declared that the unions fared better at the hands of large corporations than they do with smaller concerns. He said he approved of labor unions, and declared that no responsible manager of a corporation would consent to a blacklist.

Schiff insisted that the unemployment problem was the biggest one before the nation today. He said he believed that it was the duty of the government to solve it now that private individuals had failed.

The witness also voiced the opinion that the day had passed when great corporations could defy public opinion. "When abuses are not corrected," Schiff said, "public opinion usually crystallizes into legislation, and the evils are corrected."

Schiff disagreed with the testimony offered by Samuel Untermyer, a New York attorney, to the effect that two groups of New York bankers dominate the nation's railroad system. He characterized Untermyer's assertion as "sheer nonsense."

Professor Jacob H. Hollander, of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, was the next witness. He said the present industrial unrest was due to poverty and not pauperism.

"The present situation is not the result of a lack of wealth," he said, "but it is due to improper distribution."

Just before Schiff was excused, Chairman Welsh asked him to what extent he thought the directors of large corporations were responsible for labor troubles.

"I do not consider them responsible at all," Schiff replied. "They should see that proper conditions prevail, but they cannot interfere with the operation of their plants."

"We should find employment for everyone finding work," Schiff continued. "Even the unemployed could work if the government, through institutions, would show them how."

"We should have a method of advancing money to the needy to tide them over adverse circumstances—loans that could be repaid so the borrowers would not be robbed of their self respect."

"The government also should solve the problem of distributing labor," Schiff said. "If he knew whether the Western Union Telegraph maintained a black list, Schiff said he did not believe the company had such a list."

Schiff characterized the new banking law as "progressive legislation which was 50 years advance of the times."

PLAINTIFF IS GIVEN VERDICT FOR $895

Sale of Patent Pump Declared By Jury to Have Been Fraudulent Transaction

Finding for the plaintiff in every count asked for the jury in the case of Frank Schuler against F. A. Evans brought in a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $895 and costs at noon today.

The controversy arose over the selling of one-third interest in a patent pump valve by the defendant to Mr. Schuler for the sum of $850. Later Mr. Schuler advanced $45 more for the perfection of the patent and then he claimed that he had been defrauded of this amount. The defendant was given ten days in which to file a motion for a new trial and Judge Kelly in granting the request for an extension of time stipulated that the motion be argued on the Saturday following the filing of the motion.

S. H. Heitzel appeared for the plaintiff and Allen R. Joy, of Portland, for the defendant.

J. E. Hosmer, indicted on the charge of criminal libel and arrested in Silverton yesterday, was arraigned in department No. 1 of the circuit court today and given until Friday morning at 9 o'clock to enter his plea in the case. The indictment brought in by the grand jury states that Hosmer reprinted the alleged affidavit of Mary Lassman on January 15 which caused his former arrest and conviction. In doing so Hosmer referred to himself as a "dead game sport" in coming out again with the article which caused the trouble before.

The trial of Blasius Grasser, charged with the murder of Elmer Bacon, began this afternoon at 1 o'clock and the examination of the jurors began. A special venire of 12 jurors were drawn as it was announced by the attorneys in the case that the selection of the jurors would be long drawn out. It is not expected that the taking of the testimony in the case will begin before tomorrow afternoon. Grasser is charged with second degree murder, for the killing of the 37 year old boy who climbed upon the fence on his way to work in the dock of the dawn on January 4. Grasser confessed to the crime to Sheriff Clark and deputy sheriff W. I. Needham.

ENGLAND MUST EXPLAIN.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Following the receipt of a report from Ambassador Gerard, of the British detention of the cotton steamer Greenbrier, the state department today asked Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, to obtain a full explanation of the incident from England.

Would Give Damages For Trespassing of Livestock

Acting under the belief that it is a matter of satisfaction to no man to send another to the penitentiary, which is the only recourse at hand under the present law, the British ambassador today asked Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, to obtain a full explanation of the incident from England.

Representative Weeks has given the subject considerable study and his action in submitting a revised and amended trespass law for animals was actuated by the experience of a considerable amount of money and no satisfaction was gained on either side. Under the Weeks' bill it will not only be possible to recover punitive damages for loss suffered by reason of the trespass of animals upon one's property, whether fenced or not as the law requires, but it is shown that the owner of the animals which inflicted the damage was flagrantly or wilfully guilty of neglect or carelessness in allowing his stock to run at large, he may be punished by imprisonment also.

Mr. Weeks' bill takes up all of the laws governing what constitute a lawful fence and animal trespass and modifies them into one act, which at once harmonizes and simplifies them.

Administration Bill To Cure Non Employment

Capitol, Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 20.—The so-called administration employment bureau bill was introduced in the senate today by Senator Keboe and it aims to sweep out the suggestions made by Governor Johnson's message to the legislature. The measure is not as drastic as some of the independent employment bureau measures already introduced by various members in that it will not abolish the already established privately owned employment agencies.

Instead of placing the state employment agencies under the control of the state bureau of labor statistics with the state labor commissioner at the head or there, the Keboe bill puts employment matters in the hands of the state commission on housing and immigration.

For violations of the law licenses may be taken from private agencies. The bill carries an appropriation of $150,000 for the operation of this department. It is understood that some slight friction is likely to develop between the bureau of labor statistics and the house and immigration commission regarding the management of this department. A bill by Senator Lyon, pending in the senate, however, would consolidate these commissions under one head. The success of the Lyon measure will avoid any division of opinion as to authority over the employment agencies.

HAYESVILLE ITEMS

(Capital Journal Special Service.) Mr. Reynolds' apple home at Hayesville was the scene of a most enjoyable time Saturday evening when the Barren class of the Sunday school and a number of their invited guests spent the evening in wrestling, boxing, jumping and other gymnastic sports. The affair was a stag party and many stunts were pulled off which caused much merriment. Doughnuts and cider served in up-to-date style formed the refreshments for the evening.

Grant Wilkoff and John Stettler, of Salem, spent Sunday at the homes of their respective parents in Hayesville. Mrs. Vickery arrived last week from Indiana and will spend several weeks visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. M. Holbert, whom she had not seen for twenty-one years. Mrs. Vickery intends visiting other Oregon places before returning to her home state.

Mrs. R. A. Pruitt is recovering from a severe illness. Mr. S. Willis visited school Wednesday and gave the pupils of the advanced room an interesting address. His subject was "Habit."

The attendance in the primary room during the past week was only about half its usual number owing to the illness of many of the pupils.

Gallant Lancaster Sargeant Promoted Only to be Killed Two Days Later

London, Dec. 28.—(By mail to New York.)—Among the many heroes of the war who have been struck down before they had a chance to enjoy the reward of their bravery, was Sergeant Heaney, of King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, who was killed in action two days after being promoted lieutenant and recommended for the Distinguished Conduct Medal for an exploit which saved an entire division.

The Royal Lancasters have been continuously in the firing line since the outbreak of the war, and with every man performing prodigies of valor it was difficult to single out particular acts of courage. Heaney's chance came one day, when the situation as regards food supplies for his division was becoming desperate. For ten whole days the roads from the trenches to the supply depot had been rendered impassable by the hail of shells rained upon by the enemy, and no fresh provisions could be got to the troops in the firing line.

Heaney went to his major and offered to take the wagons through the rain and shells and bring back food. He did not say he would try. He said he would go and fetch the provisions. The major said "Impossible!" and then he persisted, "I show my madness." Nevertheless the sergeant was allowed to take a few comrades, and with the wagons he set off down the shell torn track. Four miles separated the trenches from the depot, and every yard of the way there and back lay under a devastating fire, but Heaney got through and brought back provisions with a loss of only two horses killed and one man wounded.

He was promoted to lieutenant on the spot, and recommended for the D. C. M. but two days later he was killed in action at Le Touquet. Staff officers declare that he undoubtedly saved the division from capture or annihilation.

"It's fine to be in the Coldstreams, but you don't necessarily care about living in the cold streams," writes Private A. K. Hammond, of the Coldstream Guards, describing 23 awful days his regiment spent in the trenches. "Not a man cured a tinker's ensa for the German shells and bullets, but to stand for days—twenty-three to be exact—at a stretch, in water, not only up to your ankles but more often above your knees, takes a lot of stuffing out of you."

"We dropped into a terrible place a month ago. No matter whether it was fine or wet, the water kept trickling into the trenches. As fast as we tried to drain our trenches they filled up again with the water that oozed through the hillside. Life in these trenches has been damnable; but it is marvelous what one can get used to when pushed. Officers were fired the same as ourselves and as they took it as part of the game, we did likewise. Our officers has re-christened the battalions. He has named us the 'amphibious brigade,' and says when he gets home he will back up against any battalion in the British army, or any other army, for feats of endurance under any condition anyone likes to name. You can take it from me that our officers, many of whom I am sorry to say have gone under, have performed wonders, and there is not a man in the whole brigade of Guards but what would readily admit that all the hardships the men have endured have been shared by the officers, the officers who, in full dress in the park, so many people were disposed to regard as aristocratic peacocks."

COMMERCIAL CLUB TO ENJOY SPECIALS TONIGHT

Meeting Will Be Addressed by Prominent Legislators and Well-Known Business Men. Some special features are planned for the regular January meeting of the Salem commercial club, to be held in the club rooms tonight at 6:30. As usual the meeting will take the form of a dinner and will be served in the billiard room of the club.

After the short business meeting the gathering will be turned over to Tommaster Tom Kay, who will introduce the speakers of the evening.

The general topic for discussion will be prospects for 1915, including the outlook in both business and political lines. These will be considered by such speakers as Judge Charles L. McNary, Senators R. R. Butler and Gus Mosher, and Representative L. R. Hinton, of Portland. These men are all considered to be most effective speakers, and the club feels gratified in securing their attendance for the evening.

In addition, Mr. James G. Crawford, of Belfast, Ireland, will be there to talk in a general way of the flax industry. He is a director in the largest flax spinning concern in the world—the York Street, of Belfast—and is here making a special study of local conditions in this industry.

The supper will be served promptly at 6:30 and every effort made to conclude by 8 p. m. so that club members may double up on the evening. Members and outside visitors are urged to attend.

DEPUTY SHERIFFS ARRESTED. New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 20.—Twenty-two special deputy sheriffs alleged to be involved in the shooting of strikers yesterday at Roosevelt, N. J., were arrested here today.

WAR PICTURES FROM WINDMILL COUNTRY OF BELGIUM AND FRANCE, WHERE BATTLE RAGES

1. BATTERED WINDMILL NEAR ARMENTIERES, FRANCE. 2. BELGIAN INFANTRY BEHIND TURF TRENCH. 3. BELGIANS WITH DOG-DRAWN MITRAILLEUSES

These war pictures were taken in the windmill country of France and Belgium, where the fighting is the severest in the western theater of war. Along the many canals in that section there are stanch brick windmills, generally three stories high, with huge revolving wings. One of these is shown in the illustration. It has been battered by bullets and artillery fire. Both sides use these windmills as temporary forts. The other pictures show Belgian soldiers. In one infantry are seen firing from a turf trench, and in the other are seen the famous Belgian dogs with the mitrailleuses that they draw.
