Aviators Make Attack On German Submarine Base At Handover

London, April 5.—The sinking of two more vessels by German submarines became known here today. It was announced that the British steamer Olivine had been torpedoed, and from Portsmouth came reports of the sinking of the Russian vessel Hermes.

The Hermes was a three-masted ship, 1,000 tons, and was on her way to the bottom when she was sunk. The crew was rescued and taken to the island of Orkney. The Hermes was a Russian vessel.

The sinking of both the Olivine and Hermes is the latest in a series of attacks on shipping in the North Sea. The German submarines have been very active in this region, and have sunk many vessels.

The British aviators who made the attack on the German submarine base at Handover, in the North Sea, were successful. They destroyed several submarines and inflicted heavy damage on the base.

WHITE-HOPE WHO MADE GOOD IN RING

JESS WILLARD

HEAVIES FIGHT BEFORE GAY RINGSIDE CROWD

Armed soldiers of the republic of Cuba, picturesque in their uniforms, patrolled every section of the enclosure, keeping splendid order. At 12:20 it was apparent that the fight would be late. All officials were at the ringside, but the principals had not yet shown. At that time nearly all the seats were taken, but there was a new-coming stream of humanity still pouring forward from the entrance.

Johnson got his $30,000 share of Lamson an hour before the fight was scheduled to start, in accordance with the agreement by which he accepted the challenge of the white hope, Willard.

At the time for the fight to begin there were only 10,000 spectators in sight. The advance sale of $100,000 claimed by the promoters looked mythical. The movie men and the newspaper photographers at 12:25 began setting up their machines to prepare for the entrance of Willard and Johnson.

Mrs. Johnson, the white wife of the negro champion, was shown a seat at the ringside by Tom Flanagan, Johnson's chief second, at 12:30. President Menocal, of the Cuban republic, entered a box in the grandstand at about 12:30. He was accompanied by a party of Cuban officials. The Cuban fight fans gave President Menocal a noisy welcome.

It was announced Johnson received $29,500 for his services in currency in his dressing room. Johnson previously received $10,000, making the $39,500 guaranteed the champion when he accepted Willard's challenge.

The officials were introduced to the crowd during the wait for the fighters to put in their machines into action and checked off several feet of film while the officials looked. Promoter Curley had a row with Mac, the official announcer, and dragged him out of the ring. Curley then put in a substitute. The crowd was growing weary at the failure of the fighters to appear, and largely enjoyed the "preliminary" not on the card. The sun came out at about 12:50; the clouds began to drift away and there was little likelihood that rain would interfere with the spectators' comfort. A wave of hand-clapping greeted "Old Red," the Cuban contingent bursting forth into a volcano of "bravo's." The Cubans mostly occupied unreserved seats.

At 12:55, 23 minutes after the time scheduled for the fight to begin, neither of the fighters had made his appearance in the ring. The American fans were becoming impatient and showing their anger by stamping and yelling. "Bring them on."

CHAMPIONSHIP GOES TO WHITE RACE BY WILLARD'S HAYMAKER

Negro Crumples Before Youth and Punch of Giant Kansas Cowboy

PALM CHANGES AFTER 26 ROUNDS OF FIGHTING

Johnson Has Best of Only Three Rounds While Willard Takes Eleven

(By Barry Paris.)
Ringside, Havana, April 15.—Jess Willard, Kansas cowboy, brought back to the white race again this afternoon the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship. Thirty-eight-year-old Jack Johnson went down before one of the cowboy's haymakers in the 26th round. Up to that time Willard had bested the negro champion in 11 rounds. Johnson had been best in only three. Eleven rounds were even and in only a few others did the black champion have the advantage over his white opponent.

The Final Round.
A terrific right to the chin, following a left lead, put the champion out and gave Willard the title. Willard whipped his famous left in for the last time and then shot in his right with speed that was bewildering. Almost before the spectators realized it the black champion was down and out.

As early as the eighth round Johnson was showing that his condition was not what it had been in previous fights and he was puffing badly. He hung on during the ninth round but recovered in the twelfth and carried the fight to Willard.

Willard Stands Firm.
The thirteenth was Johnson's best round. He knocked Willard at the start and all but smothered the Kansan with a rain of blows to the jaw and body. Willard withstood the storm, however, and that was the high mark of Johnson's attack. From the 13th to the 15th the fight was even but Johnson was fading. Starting with the 19th Willard steadily piled up a lead on the negro, wore him down with body and head smashes, and in the 26th had him in such condition that the knockout was hardly more than a formality.

Johnson Resorts to Clinches.
Johnson clinched steadily in the later rounds. The 21th was almost one long clinch, Johnson holding on and watching his seconds. In the 25th round Willard was forcing the fighting. Johnson tried to stay in close but Willard broke away with rights to the body and lefts to the jaw.

Referee Welsh was forced to step between the fighters in the last round to make Johnson break. The negro held on from the start. Willard sent a hard left to the jaw and Johnson staggered back, all but out. He clinched and held on but Willard broke away and smothered over another left and then a right that brought the championship back to the white race. Johnson dropped like a log.

Crowd Goes Wild.
Willard's seconds jumped into the ring and almost mobbed the new champion in their frenzy of delight. The crowd surged toward the ring, shouting that a crowd of 30,000 would witness the fight as a result of the fight, walked gingerly to his corner and put on his bathrobe, amid a storm of cheering. His lips were out somewhat from blows Johnson landed during the fourth round when he drew the first blood of the fight.

Johnson dropped like a log and did not even try to get up. A near riot followed when the crowd rushed toward the ring in an effort to reach Willard. Shouting and yelling, Americans and Cubans buried themselves in a confused mass toward the new champion. More than 200 women in the grandstand stood on their chairs, cheering the negro's conqueror.

Cuban soldiers near the ringside climbed over the ropes, drew their bayonets and threatened to maul any man who put his foot inside. Having been sent there to prevent a disturbance, it was their duty to prevent one.

FORMER BLACK CHAMPION IN THE DISCARD

JACK JOHNSON

PATIENT RUNS AMUCK WITH MURDEROUS AXE

Suddenly seized with the hallucination that he was an attendant and in charge of a crowd of patients detailed to do some grubbing at the asylum farm, Dan J. White, a patient, ran amuck armed with an axe this morning, started in to clear out the whole institution. He made an unsuccessful attempt to kill Attendant Herbert Taylor, who interfered with his assertion of authority, inflicting a deep gash in the cheek with the blade of the axe, and started out of the building with nobody knows what designs in his muddled brain, but was met by a posse of officers and attendants and was overpowered and disarmed before he could inflict any further damage. Taylor's wound is not serious but very painful.

As is customary on week-day mornings Attendant Taylor started out with a crew of about 20 patients to do some grubbing on state land on the hill back of the farm buildings. When the crew was engaged in selecting tools for the work White suddenly was seized with a violent attack of insanity, imagined that he was an attendant and began to order patients around. "Line up," he ordered. When Attendant Taylor attempted to persuade White that he was not an attendant White took offense and made a vicious swin get Taylor's head with the axe. Taylor warded off the force of the blow sufficiently to save having his head from being chopped off but not to avoid a deep cut in the cheek which penetrated to the bone. White then started out for the building, a multitude of designs in his muddled brain, when he was met by a posse which was organized by Dr. Evans, physician at the farm and composed of the druggist and five other employes, armed with guns, rakes, pitchforks and other articles and weapons of war. White started to put up a determined and bloody resistance but, by clever maneuvering and diplomatic tactics the posse surrounded him and finally overpowered and disarmed him without his inflicting serious injury to anyone.

During the excitement of the fight between White and Attendant Taylor, Frank Noeske, another patient who was a trusty and regarded as harmless, took it into his head to elope. He has been located near Pratum, however, and some attendants have been sent in pursuit to bring him back. Dan J. White, the patient who ran amuck, was committed to the asylum from Yamhill county in 1910, and was formerly a traveling salesman from Minnesota. Noeske was twice committed to the asylum from Multnomah county, the first time under the name of Jacob Lieberman.

BRITISH BATTLESHIP POUNDED TO PIECES BY TURKISH GUNS

Lord Nelson Stranded and At Mercy of Forts--Turks Lose Warship

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y., April 5.—The British battleship Lord Nelson has been destroyed by the fire of the Turkish forts defending the Dardanelles, Athens dispatches received here today declare.

The Lord Nelson was one of the allied warships engaged in bombarding the Dardanelles fortifications. The dispatch telling of its destruction declares that the Lord Nelson became stranded inside the strait. Unable to withdraw from the range of fire, the battleship was pounded to pieces by the Turkish guns.

The Lord Nelson carried a crew of 805 men. She was built in 1906 and was a vessel of 18,500 tons, 425 feet long. Her armament included four 12-inch guns and guns of smaller calibre.

More than 30,000 Anglo-French troops have been landed on Lemnos Island for operations against the Dardanelles in support of the bombardment fleet, according to Athens dispatches here today.

Correspondents of Berlin papers, in telling of the landing of the allied forces, declare they are confident that the land operations will be as successful as the attack by the warships has been.

Reports that the landing of the

RUSSIAN ADVANCE IS MEETING WITH GRIM RESISTANCE

Austro-Germans Fight Over Every Inch of Ground In Orderly Retreat

INVADERS LOSING MANY MEN IN MOUNTAIN PASSES

Austrian Citizens Rioting and Demanding Peace of Government

Petrograd, April 5.—Steady advance of the Russians in the Uszak pass region of the Carpathians is reported here today. The Austro-German forces defending the pass are reported to be slowly retreating through the mountains to their main fortifications on the heights.

A great battle, rivaling in intensity, the fight for possession of the Lufkow pass is now beginning, dispatches here indicate. Although the enemy is retreating, the retreat is well organized and the Russians are forced to fight over every foot of ground which is being gained. Operations are being hampered by alternate thaws and frozes. Roads are all but impassable.

Newspapers today warned their readers that the Russian losses in the fighting now developing will undoubtedly be large, but declared that before the end of the week, the Russian advance into Hungary proper will certainly be under way.

Having seized the railway through Lufkow pass, after the most desperate fighting, the Russians are now about to descend the Labore river valley into Hungary. Reports of enormous numbers of prisoners taken by the Russians have reached here. Some dispatches declare that more than 250,000 Austrians and Germans have been captured.

Citizens In Riots.
Rome, April 5.—Serious disturbances, during which several persons were killed and wounded when it was necessary to call out troops, were reported throughout Austria today, following the admission of the war office of reverses in the Carpathians, according to dispatches to newspapers here.

In Vienna, Budapest, Brno and Prague, these dispatches declare, crowds thronged the streets shouting and jeering and demanding that the government sue for peace. In all four cities, troops were called out and it was not until shots had been fired that the demonstrations were suppressed.

In announcing the retirement of the Austrian troops in the Beskin region the war office declared positively that Russian troops released by the capture of the fortress of Przemysl were now taking part in the field fighting. The arrival of these reinforcements, it was stated, made it necessary for the Austrians to retire.

Other dispatches received here report heavy fighting to be still in progress between the Lufkow and Uszak passes in the Carpathians.

troopers and mine sweepers which had been sighted. The breechlocks of the guns aboard the Medjidieh were removed and when it was seen that the vessel was seriously injured the Turks themselves torpedoed her so there would be no chance of the enemy recapturing the warship.

The admiralty also announced that a mine sweeper of the enemy, attempting to enter the Dardanelles, was sunk by Fort Kum Kaleh.

When a man is being flattered he pretends not to believe what the flatterer is saying, but he does. He has thought the same thing of himself lots of times.

Przemysl Army Is Used in Hungarian Invasion

(By J. W. T. Mason.)
New York, April 5.—The first positive information that the Russians have decided to use the Przemysl army in the Hungarian campaign was contained in the official announcement from Vienna that large reinforcements had compelled the Austrians to retire in the Beskid region.

Przemysl capitulated March 22. It must be dislodged and driven toward the plains before the Russians establish their ascendancy.

It is probable that German reinforcements are being rushed to the assistance of the hard-pressed Austrians. If the Slavs succeed in establishing themselves on the Hungarian side of Lufkow pass before Germanys arrive they will win an important advantage. This is the immediate work before the Przemysl army.

Submarine Destroyed

Paris, April 5.—Two German submarines were destroyed and a third badly damaged in the raid upon the German naval base at Heligoland, Belgium, by Royal aviators, March 29, the war office here announced today.

The ships were gutted by fire caused by the explosion of bombs dropped by the aviators, the statement declared, inflicting the heaviest damage. Forty German workmen were killed and 20 wounded.

Detailed trials have been made upon the Heligoland base, located near Antwerp, but that of March 29, mentioned in the official report, is accepted as being the most successful. As many as a score of aviators have participated in concerted attacks upon the German base. The destruction of two submarines represents the greatest success the airmen have scored.

The raids upon Zebruggen and other submarine bases being used by the Germans will undoubtedly be resumed with increased vigor. The plan of the war office is to damage the ships, to make it impossible for them to be ready to assemble or repair submarines there for operations in the North Sea.

Further success for French aviators was also announced in the statement in which it was announced that a German battleship which had been damaged by dropping bombs, it was announced.

SOLDIERS' HOME "DOG" EXPECTED COMMISSION

Not Customary To Issue Commissions To Subordinates Says Board of Control

Although Dr. Stewart, of Roseburg, was appointed physician and surgeon for the Oregon soldiers' home by Commission Chief and his appointment was announced by the board of control early in March, the board received notice at its regular monthly meeting Saturday that Dr. Stewart had not assumed the duties of his post as yet and did not intend to do so until he had received his commission from the board of control. Secretary Goodin of the board of control was instructed to advise Dr. Stewart that it was not customary to issue commissions to subordinate position in connection with such appointments and that necessary formalities were not necessary in his case. It was assumed by the board that he would assume the duties at once upon receipt of his commission.
