WOMAN'S AWFUL CRIME.
Muskegon, Mich., April 24.—
Jealous because of her husband's love for his 13-year-old daughter, Mrs. Albert Steel, aged 32, the girl's stepmother, bound and blindfolded her, forced muriatic acid down her throat and then held the child in her arms until she died.
The body, partly burned, was found lying in an alley. Upon being arrested the woman confessed, displaying no emotion whatever. She calmly described how she held the struggling girl as the acid slowly ate into the victim's vitals. The police said that Mrs. Steel would be examined as to her sanity.

FEMALE AGENCIES ARE NOT EXEMPT FROM PAVING FEE

Employment Agency Act Makes No Distinction—Effective May 22

Because the recent legislature made no distinction as between employment agencies as to classification or exemption, agencies which do an exclusive business in the securing of employment for women are not to be exempted from paying the annual license fee under the provisions of the employment agency license and regulation act, according to the interpretation of Labor Commissioner Hoff who has supervisory jurisdiction over the enforcement of the law. Mr. Hoff also declares that the law will be rigidly enforced on and after May 22, when effective.

The question was raised by the Howe's ladies' employment agency, of Portland, the proprietor of which made inquiry of Commissioner Hoff as to whether that agency would be exempt from paying the annual license fee of $50 because of the fact that employment was secured exclusively for the benefit of females. Commissioner Hoff notified the agency that no exemptions whatever were provided for in the act and that an exception could not be made in favor of exclusively ladies' agencies as it would be open discrimination. This agency also wanted to know if it would be privileged to remain open until June 1, presumably because its city license does not expire until that date, but Mr. Hoff informed the proprietor that the law goes into effect on May 22 and that he had no discretion in the matter and could not stretch the point in favor of any agency.

Up to date an even dozen requests for application blanks have been received by Labor Commissioner Hoff from agencies all over the state desiring to take out licenses and comply with the law and formal applications for licenses have been received from five employment agencies. All are accompanied by the required bond and check for the amount of license, which are governed by the population of the town or city in which the agencies are engaged in business.

The employment agencies' regulatory act, which is designated as Chapter 128 of the general laws for 1915, provides that "every person who procures employment or help for another or furnishes intelligence or information for persons securing employment or help for compensation, shall be deemed an employment agent" and subject to the provisions of the act. It prescribes a fixed schedule of fees to be charged by employment agents for procuring employment or positions for both male and female employes, based upon the amount of wages or salaries to be received. The fees to be charged for securing positions for females, where the salary is not to exceed $60 per month; 5 per cent of one month's earnings in said position; for females, where the salary is $60 and not more than $100 per month, a fee of $5 is allowed, and likewise for males receiving salaries over $60 and not to exceed $100, and in no case shall the fee exceed $7.50.

Licenses are to be paid annually and employment agents are also required to furnish bonds subject to the approval of the labor commissioner. The amount of license fee to be paid and bond to be furnished are graduated in proportion to the population of the city or town in which the agency maintains its office and principal place of business, ranging from a fee of $2.50 and bond of $100 in cities less than 2,500 population, based upon the last U. S. census, to a fee of $50 and bond of $1,000 for cities of a population of 150,000 or over. Salem comes within the classification of cities of 10,000 to 20,000 which carries a license fee of $7.50 per year and bond in the amount of $250.
