"We are certainly glad to be in αι own home once more," said Mrs. Hawley, "and we plan to enjoy it to the fullest extent during our few months' stay. The lack of the natural home atmosphere is one of the unpleasant sides of congressional life, nearly all the elective officials and their families being either domiciled during their term of office in hotels or apartments. Few have houses, the expense of furnishings and servants being too great. The feel-ing of temporary establishment is characteristic of all elective officials, and they, of course, make their plans accordingly. The servant problem is one of the most important in Washing ton life, and although there are 100, 990 negroes in the city, which comprises one-third of the entire population, it is almost impossible to seeure
