"It was the largest attendance upon an occasion of the kind that I have ever witnessed in the state," says State School Superintendent Churchill, in commenting upon the success of the Lane county school children's industrial fair, which was held in Junction City yesterday. The presence of the governor, who delivered an address for the benefit of the children and the people in general, and the Eugene educators, who were there in force to lend their presence and influence to the attractions of the exhibit, were greatly responsible for the success. Mr. Churchill states, He modestly made no mention of his own presence and delivery of an address figuring as an attraction, but the chief cause of the big attendance was the action of the management of the exhibit in fixing the attendance of the children of the different school districts and the parents who registered their attendance as two of the important points in the making of awards of the prizes. The fair was a decided success in every particular.
