Artists Paint Canvasses While Big Bombs Burst

Note—The following is the first of a series of stories from the British front, written by William G. Shepherd, United Press staff correspondent and the only American representing an individual American press association, who is now with General Sir John French's army under official credentials. It is released for use April 28. The second story in the series will be printed April 29.

By William G. Shepherd. (Copyright 1915 by the United Press; copyrighted in Great Britain.) With the British army, Northern France, April 16.—(By mail to New York.)—Neuve Chappelle is the new head which General French has just thrust on the 400 mile strip of trenches which Madame Europe wears upon her breast.

Just as the great transcontinental railroads of America pass impressively through small towns so the great transcontinental trenches have had their route bent by the great English general to take in the town of Neuve Chappelle.

Citizens Are Proud. I find the residents of the city extremely proud of the distinction. This is probably because they personally helped General French in his task of trench bending. There are no French people remaining here; in fact there are no houses remaining.

This showery afternoon a rainbow is shining on a huge black cloud over Neuve Chappelle and the French magazine artists who are in this section like a party of tourists to England's latest possession are making every artistic effort to draw it into their picture.

"People will think we're faking it if we mention the rainbow," says one artist. "But it's there," says another famous artist. "I'm going to put it in."

The rainbow was there in truth, bending over the little crushed French town, with no one to see it but the English soldiers who peeped out of their trenches at it, and the tourists. All the artists but one are putting in the rainbow. The one is Matania of Italy and London. A shell broke within 15 feet of him this afternoon, splashed mud on the picture in which he intended the rainbow to appear and spoiled it. So now he is drawing a picture of a bursting shell with a correspondent and artist running away from the high hills of mud.

A visit to Neuve Chappelle is bound to be full of incidents of the sort that attracted Matania's attention. City Is Thoroughly Destroyed. Neuve Chappelle is as thoroughly destroyed as a crushed eggshell. Its only streets are the trenches, its only houses are dug out in the trench line, shells cross the sky above it and burst in the rains. There is nothing more that a shell can do to Neuve Chappelle except stir up the debris. The shells have ransacked the cemetery, blown open the graves, scattered bits of coffins and fragments of bones over the cemetery lawns and then churned the lawns into a mass of mud, bones, coffin bits and fragments of gravestones. Then, as if nothing would satisfy their fury, they have blown this mixture into the air and scattered it all over the neighboring portion of the town. Neuve Chappelle has disappeared, but its name goes down into history as the town which was shelled by six hundred cannon, as the town which was fought for between the English and the Germans, at a cost of 100 lives for every raised house in its streets.

The English name Neuve Chappelle because it is a token of General French's proof that the German, in a trench, can be routed in an attack. The battle of Neuve Chappelle marked the first attack, on a line of any great extent, against entrenched German forces. It is a proof that has put fire into the fighting of both the English and the French.

World Seems Better. "The world's better now," said an English soldier to me in the trenches the afternoon. "We had struck in our trenches month after month, wounding here, strong the debris across the way really was, and now we know. We are out of our old trenches into the new ones in Neuve Chappelle. Its just like that, wowing and the Jack Johnson fight."

I asked him how the two are alike. "Well, we were like the cowboy in the first part of the war, and Germany was like Jack Johnson. Germany knew that if she kicked us, she'd have to do it in the early morning, she could not make a long fight of it."

Well, but writer's fighting was just like the early rounds in the row for Jack Johnson's fight. Can you imagine how early the rowing was until he saw that Johnson was beginning to get tired?

And can you imagine how happy he felt when he found out that all his blows were beginning to worry the big black fellow? Well, that was us at Neuve Chappelle. Neuve Chappelle showed us. And all of us fellows who were in the fight felt just like Willard must have felt about the sixteenth round.

Capture Gives New Hope. The point is not that Neuve Chappelle was interested in the Jack Johnson fight, although the news should flash like a shell fire through the trenches in the town as soon as it was received, thirty hours later, but that the capture of Neuve Chappelle put a new hope and a new fighting spirit into the English army and into the French army. It put a smile on the faces of English soldiers that had been worn by the grinding rigors of winter, it put them into tune with the spring that is turning everything green in trenchland. It will make the French people understand the rainbow in the black cloud, which the French artist sketched today.

A day at Neuve Chappelle including the trip there and back from the English headquarters is the event of a lifetime.

ELIZABETH R. CASE, WELL-KNOWN SOCIETY, CLUB WOMAN, DEAD

Was Formerly Society Editor of Capital Journal—Funeral Thursday

All Salem was saddened when the announcement was made this morning of the passing of Mrs. Elizabeth Remington Case, which occurred at her residence on South Commercial street at 5:15 o'clock. The end came quietly after several weeks' illness, during which time hosts of friends had daily demonstrated their kindly thought by floral remembrances and messages of cheer. Mrs. Case leaves a daughter, Mrs. Seba Case Wall, with whom she had made her home since taking up her residence in Salem seven years ago, residing here from Portland, their original home being in Fairbault, Minn., a several years' residence also being made in Omaha, Nebraska.

Probably no person ever made more friends in the city than did Mrs. Case. Although coming here as a stranger, she had no adjustments to make, taking her place easily and naturally in social, club and religious circles. She was beloved as a member of each, her relations in the latter being with the Episcopal church. For several years Mrs. Case was society editor of the Daily Capital Journal, her work, which was discontinued in December, 1913, owing to ill health, being peculiarly graceful and pleasing. She was an active member of the Salem Woman's club, at the time of her death being chairman of the press committee of that organization.

The funeral services will be conducted from St. Paul's church at 9 o'clock tomorrow (Thursday) morning, the body being sent to Portland immediately afterwards for cremation. The pallbearers will be George A. Wood, George G. Hingham, Joseph Baumgartner, Asa Bell Bush, W. Melvin Plimpton and Fredrick D. Thiesen.
