PROSPECTS GOOD FOR LOGANBERRY INDUSTRY

Increased Demand is Manifest in Eastern Markets -- Some Contracting of Fresh Fruits with Cannery Augurs Good for Evaporated Product -- Important Business Will Be Transacted by Loganberry Growers in Salem Monday

Over 750 growers in the state of Kansas alone have placed a line of Willamette valley loganberries, in cartons, in stock within the past two months. This, according to information given out by the Salem Fruit Union, is being the result of the efforts of three men handling the fruit as a side line with the union, and it has nothing to do with the immense business, of an initial or introductory nature, which has been done in Iowa, Missouri and other middle western states and throughout the east. This is only an instance of how the loganberry in the evaporated state, is being exploited by the union, H. S. Gil & Co. and the Willamette Valley Fruit Growers' association within the past few months, and it augurs good for the future of the evaporated loganberry industry. Not only have all of those growers in Kansas placed the berries upon their shelves to be given a "try-out," and they have begun to establish a demand that is steadily developing proportionally that indicate permanency, but repeat orders are coming in constantly. In fact, as has been stated previously in the columns of the Capital Journal, the "loganberry is just coming into its own." Loganberry growers from all parts of the valley, where this variety of fruit is grown more or less extensively, will be in attendance at the meeting of the Loganberry Growers' association, which will be held in the Commercial club assembly room, in this city, next Monday, and it is expected that some important action will be taken bearing upon the future stability of the industry. At this time special attention will be devoted to encouraging all growers, inside and outside of the association and pool, to spare no efforts to secure the very best results in the curing of the fruit for the market and, above all things, to stand out for a living price for their products. At this meeting ways and means will also be discussed, and probably adopted, to provide for a systematic campaign of advertising and education throughout the country in order to place the many virtues of the fruit, both in the evaporated and canned state, before the consumer to the very best advantage. At 10 o'clock in the morning the board of directors will meet and outline a program of procedure for the big meeting of the growers, which will take place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Latest reports from the country indicate that, while some damage has been inflicted upon the coming crop by the frost of the morning of April 30, the chief damage, aside from reducing the crop prospects probably 50 per cent of a normal, was done to the first blossoms, which will have a tendency to bring the berries on the market somewhat later than usual, but this season is considerably advanced over the ordinary season and the difference will be very slight. The second and third pickings are usually the heaviest, and the frost is said to have wrought the most serious damage upon the blossoms of the first three pickings, but this will probably be compensated for to a greater or less degree through the development of the later blossoms, which, under ordinary conditions, shrivel up and do not mature. Local fruit canneries are said to have contracted a considerable amount of fresh loganberries for canning purposes at 2 cents per pound, and, in some instances, a shade better, but the members of the association and fruit union pool do not regard this as serious. On the contrary, they are pleased to hear it, since the pool has been closed and the contracting is being done by growers outside of the pool, and all of the fruit will be disposed of and out of the way of the evaporated product. It is said that growers who are selling to canneries for this low price, which barely pays for the picking and cultivation with a small margin of profit to pay for labor and taxes, are of the class who do not hold for a fair margin of profit upon their product, and usually sell to the first man that comes along for enough to cover expenses, with the result that an inferior grade of fruit is dumped indiscriminately upon the market with demoralizing effects. At any rate, according to those in position to speak with authority, the future for the loganberry industry is very promising, and is being daily buoyed up by reports of repeat orders from the east, and these are decidedly encouraging. It is expected that next Monday's meeting will be the largest ever held and elaborate preparations are being made for the reception of the growers.

Famous Dallas Band Will Be Reorganized

(Capital Journal Special Service.) Dallas, Tex., May 27.—At a meeting of the musicians of the city held in Dallas Monday evening, steps were taken for the reorganization of the famous Dallas band, which disbanded last season on account of the failure of the city to appropriate a sum of money for its maintenance. A committee of business men have been at work for the past week with members of the band and a sufficient sum of money has been subscribed for the support of the band for the coming six months. At the meeting held Monday evening, August P. Biser was elected president of the organization, F. Smith secretary, W. H. Boylston treasurer, Carl Williams manager and George Morton drum major and assistant manager. Mr. March, the new director, who comes from Montana, will hold the first band practice this evening, when steps will be taken for completing the organization.

WEBB AND CLOUGH TO HAVE MODEL BUILDING

The Well-Known Undertaking Firm to Move to Corner of High and Court

C. B. Webb, manager of the undertaking firm of Webb & Clough, who has been identified with the firm for the past two years, has closed a long-time lease for the property at the corner of High and Court streets. The property is owned by the Elh lodge, and was formerly occupied by the Higgins grocery. The firm will move into its new location as soon as the building can be remodeled on the outside and re-built on the interior. The remodeling of the building will practically make it a new building, as it will be set several feet back from Court street to allow a front of potted plants and palms. The front of the building will be of stone finish, with mission style of architecture. The chapel entrance will be from High street, through a pergola, extending from the side of the building to the street, thus affording protection to those entering from the street. The lower floor will be furnished in mission design, and will include an office, reception room, family room, rest of their room, receiving and preparation room and the chapel. The chapel will be 10 by 40 feet, with colored windows, and furnished with opera chairs. The upper floor will be arranged into the show rooms, robe department and the morgue. The elevator will be located at the end of the building. This fall, on the space to the rear of the building, adjoining the alley, a garage will be erected. The firm expects to have a night many in the building at all times. The improvement to the building alone will approximate $2500, and will be ready for occupancy about July 1. The firm of Leburn & Clough is one of the oldest undertaking firms in the state. C. B. Webb, the present manager, took over Mr. Leburn's interest about two years ago. To the present location the firm felt that it could not give the service to which its patrons were entitled. The building when completed, with its stone mission front facing on Court street and pergola on High, will be a material improvement to this section of the city.

J. H. PATTERSON, CASH REGISTER HEAD, WINS ANTI-TRUST APPEAL

(Capital Journal Special Service.) Oakland, Cal., May 27.—That "blue sky" laws are not the whole success in the states where they have been tried, and that, through them, not investors of dollars are saved annually from swindlers and legitimate concerns, was the consensus of opinion today among the supervisors of state banks who are meeting in convention here.

JOHN H. PATTERSON

In the United States circuit court of appeals President John H. Patterson of the National Cash Register company recently received the congratulations of friends after Judge Cochran of Kentucky announced the decision that made void all penalties decreed against Mr. Patterson and twenty-six of his chief associates in the National Cash Register management thirteen months ago. The decision of the celebrated case gives the conclusions of Justice William Day of the supreme court and of Judges Cochran and Sanford, district judges, who heard the appeal of the National Cash Register officials from the sentences and penalties imposed by Judge Graham. Linnes declared that the estate has now only a nominal value owing to the deprivations of the forces of the warring chieftains.

Blue Sky Laws Save Millions for Investors

Oakland, Cal., May 27.—That "blue sky" laws are not the whole success in the states where they have been tried, and that, through them, not investors of dollars are saved annually from swindlers and legitimate concerns, was the consensus of opinion today among the supervisors of state banks who are meeting in convention here. E. W. Morrill, bank superintendent of Michigan, declared that the most important effort of such laws is to deter false promoters from attempting to operate. There is also a large gain to legitimate industries, who receive the money otherwise invested in fly by night concerns, he said. In the opinion of W. F. Benson, of Kansas, the complete success of the system now depends upon the framing of "blue sky" laws which can pass the severest test of the courts. The inability to do this, he said, weakens the force of the present laws. The convention comprises banking commissioners and superintendents from nearly a score of states.

The anchorages of the battleship Oregon and the cruiser Marblehead have been shifted to remove these ships from the danger zone in the destruction of the ship 609 pounds of the navy's new explosive will be used.

AGED HERMIT LIES DOWN, DUG HIS GRAVE TO DIE

Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—Eveling death near "Dutch Louis" an aged hermit who resides in a Peoria canyon, near Los Angeles, told his few friends that his hours were numbered. Dug his grave, donned his best clothes, lay down beside the grave and died today. Coroner Hartwell, who investigated, announced that death was due to natural causes. He ordered Dutch Louis buried in the tomb he had so carefully prepared. For many years "Dutch Louis," whose real name is unknown, lived a mysterious existence deep in the mountains. He had a smoldering acquaintance with a few ranchers. It was to these that he told his story of a swiftly approaching end. The clothes in which he died were of antique design and had evidently been laid away untouched ever since the hermit went to the hills to reside.
