TOURNAMENT STARTS AT COUNTRY CLUB LINKS NEXT SUNDAY

Links In Fine Shape and Interest In Game Is Growing Rapidly

A handicap golf tournament will be held at the Country Club links next Sunday as the first of a series of golf tournaments which are now possible on account of the improved condition of the links. The new grass which has been sown on the links and is now coming up in a most excellent condition was sown on July 16, N. Eddy, the instructor at the Country Club.

The handicap to be allowed in this tournament will range all the way from 18 to 20 strokes and the final scores will be computed according to the handicap rule. Every one who has been playing on the links will be eligible to play in the tournament and the handicap will be fixed for each player according to the number of strokes which he has made in the last 18 holes when playing his average game.

After the tournament the handicaps will be re-adjusted and in case it is found that any player who has been playing below his handicap will be lowered. With the full valued handicaps to the coming tournament will have no advantage over the beginners and the final scores will be the total number of strokes it took to complete the course less the handicap. The scores will not be computed according to holes as in match play.

As the course is in such good shape it is hoped that the interest in the game is growing and the players are enjoying it more than ever. The links are in the best of shape and the game is becoming more interesting and the game is growing in popularity. Mr. Eddy has an intention of making it known one of the best golf courses in the country.

TURNER SIGNS NEW LEAGUE CATCHER FOR M'MINNVILLE GAME

George Cameron, of Central League Will Wield Big Mit Sunday

Manager John Turner of the Salem Seaside, announced this morning that he has signed George Cameron, catcher of the Central League and recently manager of the Kalamazoo, Mich. team to catch for the Seaside team in the game against the McMinnville team Sunday. It is possible that he may handle the big mitt for Salem during a good part of the season if arrangements can be made.

Cameron comes here with a stellar reputation as a catcher and Manager Turner has been seeking hands with himself at securing his services. It is barely possible the lineup may be strengthened in another place or two but there is no certainty as to this.

Captain Johnny Humphrey, who has been at the head of the Seaside for a little over two weeks, is making good with a rush in handling the mitt. He has been playing around Salem for about 10 years and has always played a hard game of fast, consistent ball. He is still playing the steady game of years ago, which has always earned him work around the third sack and as a result he is showing class.

Manager Turner has received word from Manager Wright of the Vancouver that McMinnville will come out strong in a special trial Sunday, this matter being far in excess of the early expectations. The team will leave here at 10:30 Sunday morning and leave McMinnville with the intention of playing many games there including Newberg, Lafayette, Astoria and possibly other places. This will probably be the largest delegation of players coming to Salem at one time from the Vancouver club.

SALEM BETTER PLACE TO LIVE IN THAN PORTLAND OR SEATTLE

Fertile Soil of Vacant Lots Produces Fine Hay Crop Says Nels Darling

Nels Darling, the famous Oregonian lecturer, who travels about the country delivering his lecture on "Big Towns," and incidentally telling a lot of home what they need, arrived in Salem today. He is here on his way to Portland and Seattle. He is very much impressed with the fact that about the worst thing he could say was that there was an awful economic waste in Salem, as he pointed out of the finest hay crops with the city limits. This should be cut and taken care of. In fact, Mr. Darling was so thoroughly impressed with the fact that after looking the town over he told one could afford to be away six months in the year, just for the pleasure of living here. "You are a great town," he said, "and you are just beginning to catch your second breath. You look more like one of those fine western cities moved west."

"My idea of a democracy," declared the speaker, "is a town of 50,000 where there are no poor, no rich, all meaning in the same society, and all the children attending the same schools."

The town of 50,000 can be regarded as a better place to live than a city of 100,000. In fact, he emphatically declared that a town of the size of Salem was a much better place to live and raise a family, than Portland or Seattle.

When it comes to suggesting what should be done here, Mr. Darling went on to know why Salem did not have a commission form of government, and why the city did not invest upon a law being passed compelling the city to prevent the pollution of the waters of the river. He would have a Y. M. C. A. building in the city, and equipped, keep the school hours open six days in the week throughout the year and put in swimming pools, bowling alleys, and other things. He said that the girls every day in the year. More than that, he would have a medical inspection of the schools made twice a year by competent physicians. In Oklahoma City, he said, the schools had a regular health drill and the children taught how to brush their teeth properly.

He recommended that the school system of Salem should have an agricultural course, with a 25-acre experiment at Salem. "The school should first find out what the girl is best suited to do, and then help her to do it."

As to the coming home, he estimated that a town of 20,000 would cost $2,000,000 every month. He would stop much of the coming home by the passage of a law requiring paid and honest advertising.

Incidentally, he said, as the result of his travels, he is glad to see that Oregon is in the country, and Mr. Darling.

Taken as a whole, the address was interesting throughout, the audience was large, especially among the women, and the consensus of opinion is that Mr. Darling is on the right track and also one of the best speakers that has ever appeared on the Oregonian platform.

This evening's address from Mr. Darling will be given in Portland. Following the speaker's address, a concert will be given by the famous Orpheus choir.

The program for tomorrow is to be held.

Record Yield of Alfalfa Seed In Harney County

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Ore., July 8.—A yield of 24 tons of seed and 125 tons of straw has been secured from a single alfalfa plant in Harney county in the fall of 1914. The plant was secured from the leader of a field planted in pure 30-lb. seed in 1911. The plant was reported by a man who came back from all the other places, claiming that the plant was the best of the county, the best seed in the county, and the best seed in the county.

The plant was the Baltic variety, a heavy, dry-leaf variety with wide spreading root system and much of the stems above, characteristic of alfalfa adapted to withstanding drought of summer and winter. The plant was reported by a man who came back from all the other places, claiming that the plant was the best of the county, the best seed in the county, and the best seed in the county.
