SALEM has been honored during the past week or more with the presence of many notables, including a large number of chautauquas artists and Rev. Clayton S. Brooks and Professor T. H. Pitts, who have been here in evangelistic work. With the exception of Mr. Brooks, who will remain another week, all departed for other fields today, and it has been with sincere regret that Salem people say with respect to their leaving, realizing that it will be a long, long time before so distinguished and altogether agreeable a group will be assembled here again. All who took advantage of the opportunity of hearing these people on the occasions of their public appearance realized that they were given a rare and delightful privilege, but there were many others still more fortunate—those who were favored with an invitation to meet these people in an intimate social way. Numerous luncheons, dinners and informal entertainments marked the stay of these people, and those who are in this way found these men and women with the big names in life, who, by taste culture and ability, are doing things in a big way, were most agreeable and available drawing-room companions. Possessed of the charm and gracefulness of manner which comes only to constant and close personal contact with people of all conditions of life, they have not a following of friends here in their host, that is the most flattering compliment that could be paid their genius and versatility. One of the most enjoyable of fares that has been given for these visitors was contributed by Mrs. William P. Babcock, who entertained with a supper at the Babcock home last night, following the chautauqua street services and the final chautauqua session, companion to Mr. Brooks, Mr. Pitts and Roland A. Nichols, the well-known lecturer, who interested a large crowd at the chautauqua yesterday afternoon. Curries were laid for 32 at a beautifully appointed table. A unique color motif was noted; a large art basket of lovely late roses centering the table. During the evening the guests were entertained with vocal selections by Miss Maggs and Professor Pitts, Miss Alice Blane playing an accompaniment. Mr. Nichols, who is an accomplished violinist, gave some of his original compositions, including the decidedly clever selection, "Gumption," which Babcock, a renowned artist, has made famous. Another little poem, "Dandy," which will be featured

In celebration of the birthday anniversary of R. H. McRae, relatives and friends gathered at beautiful "Oak Crest," the home of the McRae family place
