SALEM WINS FROM HARRIMAN CLUB BY HITTING THE BALL

Senators Pound Taggesell and Driscoll For 11 Hits and 7 Runs

By knocking three hits in the first inning the Senators ground the ball for the Harriman yesterday afternoon and the railroad men were never able to get up steam during the remainder of the contest. The Harriman side-thrower, Taggesell, served up curves that were as easy to follow as the winding of the Southern Pacific line, and the Senatorial strikers gleamed a total of 11 hits off of him and Driscoll, who relieved him in the fourth. They had twisted a steady game for the Senators and allowed but five wisely-aimed hits.

Reinkart led off with a "safety first," but went out at second when Humphries grounded to short. Hauser singled and then Wilson poked one over the center fielder's head and scored Humphries and Hauser. In the third inning the railroad men filled up the bases, but a double play and some fast fielding of Voss' drive and the chances of the railroaders were wrecked.

In the fourth inning, with a runner on first, Hauser made a balk and then delivered the ball. Bitter, who was batting for a balk to be called on for hitting, hit it to Bell, who caught it. The railroaders' product, however, got for a balk to be called on for hitting half of this inning. Miller and Bell drew passes and Hartford hit into a double, getting Bell and himself. Reinkart got his second hit, a two-run swat, and Miller registered. Humphries walked and Hauser was safe on Driscoll's error, and Reinkart rang the bell. Jones then salivated on his hands, rubbed some dirt on his new hat, and slammed the ball into the creek, chasing Humphries and Hauser in ahead of him. Driscoll then succeeded the mound and fanned Wilson.

In the eighth the railroaders chased in their lonely run when Voss was safe when Keene failed to pick up Miller's low throw. Edgas advanced on two outs and scored when Hartford fouled a ball. The remainder of the contest was scoreless and featureless.

OUTLAWS TAKE FAST GAME FROM TAILORS

Robbins Demons Win 6 to 5 Contest From Johnson's Broom Pushers

Two rattling good games of baseball were played at the Penitentiary, one on Saturday afternoon and the other on Sunday. The four teams that contested in these two games comprise Penitentiary Officer Joe Keller's Federal League.

On Saturday Blackie's Outlaws with Gray Griggs pitching, defeated the team representing the Tailor shop and laundry. This game was a most interesting pitchers' battle, with Griggs besting Taylor with a score of 2 to 0. Griggs struck out 15 men, but at that, if it had not been for a home-run play by Kemp the result might have been different. During last season and the first part of this season Kemp was regarded by many as a candidate for the big league, but his playing lately has shown him to be quite ordinary and with poor prospects of ever making anything out of baseball.

The game on Sunday, the third game of the series so far played, was an exciting affair that resulted in a 6 to 5 victory for Robbins' Demons over Johnson's Broom Pushers. Johnson, the Penitentiary crack regular pitcher, pitched his aggression to a near victory. With the score 5 to 3 in his favor he filled the bags and retired the men without a tally, and had two strikes on Jack LaRue, and had two total errors of grooving the ball for that Demon hitter. The result was a three play smash which shared the bases and brought victory to the Demons amid the gasps of 500 frantic spectators.

This game was featured by the hitting and fielding of Southey Henning, the Penitentiary's crack first baseman. Out of four times to hit Henning made three hits, one of which was a home run, the longest hit ever seen at the Penitentiary. Henning is scheduled to leave the prison at an early date and the Penitentiary's regular crack team will feel his loss keenly in any games they may still have to play with outside clubs.

NATIONAL LEAGUE RACE IS THRILLING

Sensational Spurt of Brooklyn Team—Leading Sluggers of Big Leagues

New York, July 19.—The National league race was full of thrills last week and promises to be even more breath-taking this—that is to say, anyone living outside Cincinnati's corporate limits. The Reds, it is conceded, have slipped over into the "wait till next year" class.

The sensational spurring of Wilbur Robinson's Brooklyn team, which can be likened only to the history-making six made by the late lamented Braves, was easily the biggest surprise of the week and the Superbas but fair to attract most of the attention, at least so long as they continue their winning ways. From the cellar to within striking distance of first place in a little over two weeks eclipses even the Braves' record.

The Cubs lost their lead during the week, due to the madly playing the most consistent full in the league, stepped into the breach. Brennan's hitters slumped awfully, while Grover Cleveland Alexander and his supporters breezed along winning games with machine-like regularity.

However, the leadership will be settled again today, tomorrow and Wednesday as the Cubs are battling the Phils at Philadelphia. Chicago took Saturday's game, cutting Philadelphia's lead down to three points.

Chicago's pennant chances are getting gray hairs in the heads of the dopsters and critics, due principally to their erratic pitching. The same may be said of the Giants. New York started what looked like a belated spurt toward the chase of the week walling the Reds and allowing it up on Saturday with a double win over the Cardinals. McGraw has a lot depending on this week, so much so, in fact, that the other clubs are waiting at their cashiers. The summary of that 1914 hunt is still green in their minds. The Braves undoubtedly have the best material in the league if they but get going.

The American league leadership is being decided in Chicago today and tomorrow, where the Red Sox are hitting hard at the heels of the rejuvenated White Sox. Both teams have been bolstered by purchases from Connie Mack and the "Trolley" is intense. Eddie Murphy, Mack's star outfielder, who joined the Sox Saturday should do a lot for Connie's team, as he was one of the greatest performers Mack had.

White Sox manager and Red Sox had, White Sox in Chicago, they can be knocking one eye and one ear called to the end of the road where Tyus K. O'Neil, banned Crawford, et al. are on knocking up ball games and adding to the Tigers' portents.

The race in the Johnson league has practically narrowed down to these three teams and it seems certain that the trio will get batting down the home stretch and neck, and one cracks under the strain or some other club develops enough punch to contest their candidacy. The latter event is not as improbable that it borders on the impossible.

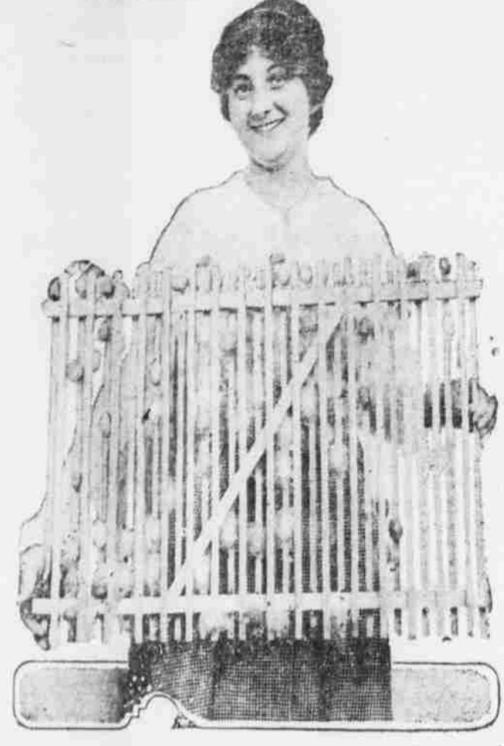

A club of fortune, still leads the league with the Indians. Standing at his heels, however, is his teammate, the aged Mr. Crawford, whose odds the team of age seems to have actively passed up. Cobb is the only real straggler of the slugger, though as he is hitting .400. Crawford trails with .347 and Joe Jackson of Cleveland with .334.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Officer are the proud parents of a bright baby girl, born July 4, 1915.

John Hoover has accepted a position with the C. W. R. & E. company, of Portland, having charge of a crew of men working on the grade toward Seattle, Wash.

John Hoover went to Philadelphia Saturday to deliver a lecture at that place Sunday evening. He will be accompanied by Rev. Gay Firth Phelps while there.

SILK EXHIBIT NEW FEATURE IN THE NATIONAL MUSEUM AT WASHINGTON

Miss Helen Stuart of the National Museum and frame with silk worms on it.

Washington, July 19.—(Special)—A great attraction at the National Museum is a nest of silkworms at work. Imported to show school children and others how silk is made, they have been very busy.

The worms were placed in the museum when about 24 days old and were fed on mulberry leaves for several days until they were fully mature and were ready to spin their cocoons.

Within the finished cocoon the silkworm sheds his skin and passes into the pupa or chrysalis stage. If the cocoon is not put through a "stoving" or stifling process, which kills the chrysalis inside, it will become a gravis worm in two weeks more and push its way out of the cocoon. Such procedure, however, is allowed only when silk moths are needed for breeding purposes, since in emerging the moth pushes through the head end of the cocoon with its head and legs, after having gnawed it with a secretion which tends to rot the fibre, thus rendering it useless for reeling and of value only for spun silk.

In order to reel the cocoons they are first immersed in boiling water, and broken to fill them of the loose outer filaments. The true thread is then unwound almost to the chrysalis, but the most living is far too fine to be reeled, and is used, with the outer waste, in the manufacture of spun silk.

A single cocoon strand is too fine for commercial use, and is therefore combined with several others to make a single thread of reeled silk. One pound of sixply reeled silk will reach a distance of about 180 miles.

The methods described for breeding are allowed to break their way out of their cocoons, and after maturing, lay from 300 to 400 eggs, dying soon after, having completed their life cycle.

Out side of its lesson in the technology of an important industry, the silk exhibit, with its living complements of specimens, presented a fine natural history lesson to the small children, and a graphic illustration to the older ones, especially to those of the sewing classes in our domestic science departments and schools.

Preserved Specimens. "A vast of preserved specimens shows the cycle of life of this industry from little animal. The egg of the silkworm is about the size of a pinhead.

The eggs of silkworms represented the first step in a series of exhibits showing what silk is, how it is manufactured and many samples of the various finished products derived therefrom. This section of the division of Entomology takes the museum visitor for a tour of instruction in silk—literally from the work which makes the silk to the finished silken goods. It includes samples of nearly every kind of silk manufactured from silk in this country and abroad.
