The oak felled by the woodsman loses in the thundering crash of its fall all thought of the slow growth through centuries on the one side, or the slower growth of civilization on the other, that brought the ax to its trunk.

Nor is any thought given to the causes of this apparently unnatural and senseless war. The ready chroniclers either ignore the subject or seize on the nearest and most dramatic, as a chorus to their drama of blood.

The venerable editor of Goodwin's Weekly is evidently as full of fight as ever. Here is the way he would deal with the shipping problem growing out of the European war—or at least the way he says he would do it: "The rightful answer to the conclusion of the authorities of Great Britain that they will henceforth hold cotton as contraband, would be to fit a couple of torpedo tubes to war—or at least the way he says he would not.

rightful answer to the conclusion of the authorities of Great Britain that they will henceforth hold cotton as contraband, would be to fit a couple of torpedo tubes to every cotton laden ship that sails from an American port, with men on board, trained in the art of firing torpedoes, and have them ready to sink any British man of war that sought to obstruct their voyage. This would not be war, but merely self-defense against a sea looter. It seems that Gerat Britain cannot outgrow her old habit of trying to bulldoze every nation on the sea. Next wheat and flour will be declared contraband. Between Great Britain and Germany neutral nations will soon be obliged to refrain from sailing any ship until the war shall be over."

The Boise, Idaho, Statesman calls attention to the work of the recent session of the legislature in Wisconsin. It was the longest in the history of the state, devoted most of its atteention to reforming the reform laws and eliminating the "isms" which came in under the LaFollette New Stage In Auditorium Held tion and brings the expense of government down to a parity with the receipts.

Under the rule of La Follette the cost of state government in Wisconsin increased from four million dollars in 1900 to over seventeen million last year. The present legislature, which has acted in harmony with the governor selected in repudiation of LaFollette's wild and expensive theories, was able to make a reduction of four million dollars, leaving the budget thirteen million for this year.

That is not satisfactory to the people, but it was appar-And this is not being underestimated. The confession of ently all the legislature and the governor could do in view were something over still out this
