Mosher Made Clothes

The time has past when a man can be even comparatively well dressed in a suit of ready-made clothes.

For example—important and decided changes in men's autumn styles have just been announced—changes so pronounced that the mass of ready-made which were manufactured last spring for this fall are now out of style and out of date.

Hence, if you desire clothes that are in vogue—clothes that are up to the minute—you must have them tailor-made.

But in order to insure that you are actually getting the latest styles, made from the very newest and best materials that the money will buy, you must order of Mosher. He will ask you no more than you will have to pay elsewhere for obsolete, antiquated, shelf-creased, non-fitting hand-me-downs, that will disgust you every time you have to put them on.

Now is the time to step in and look over the new materials and styles for Autumn-wear.

Aged Merchant Drowned When Steamer Hits Barge

Camas, Wash., Sept. 2.—Search was being made today for the body of Allan Buffin, an aged merchant, who was drowned in the Columbia river late yesterday when thrown into the water by a collision between a barge carrying 100 Sunday school picnicers and the steamer Tahoma.

The barge was being towed by a launch. The laughter of the merry-makers on the barge prevented the engineer of the launch hearing the warning signal of the Tahoma until it was too late to avoid a collision.

Buffin and another man, who were on the barge, tried to shove it out of harm's way. Both were thrown into the river. Buffin was drowned but the second man was rescued.

Cool heads prevented a panic on board the barge.

PRETTY FAR FROM HOME

Bruno Kraxberger had the pleasure of capturing a sea gull on the Molalla on Sunday. The bird bore a tag inscribed "Metropolitan Museum, New York" and had no doubt been set free from that city. What its course may have been in reaching the Molalla river, near Macksburg must, of course be left to conjecture. As the gulls invariably keep in the track of vessels to feed upon the waste food that goes into the sea, it is safe to presume that his journey was not overland, but must have been either round Cape Horn or through the Panama canal. He most likely got into the wake of a coast steamer bound for Portland and being attracted by some means into the Willamette, drifted finally into the Molalla.—Macksburg Correspondent.

HAVE LITTLE EFFECT ON BRITISH NATION

Germany's Yielding To American View Not To Influence Negotiations

London, Sept. 2.—Political authorities took the view here today that Germany's yielding to the demands of the United States in the submarine controversy will have little, if any, effect on the negotiations respecting the British order in council.

No comment came from the foreign office or other government departments today. It was stated unofficially, however, that if Great Britain makes concessions to the United States it will be because the foreign office recognizes the merits of American arguments regarding interference with neutral commerce, rather than because Germany has modified her submarine warfare.

The British press took the view that President Wilson had gained an important diplomatic victory. In political circles, however, the opinion was expressed that Germany and made few actual concessions and that such concessions as were made do not justify withdrawing the blockade orders.

A majority of the papers pointed out that, by accepting the German agreement, America approves the proposition of Admiral Von Tirpitz that non-combatants may be set adrift in open boats after a submarine has given warning that the vessel they are aboard is to be sunk.

The general tenor of the British press comment was that the United States, in its eagerness for peace, has exaggerated the importance of the German concessions.

The afternoon papers of today discussed Ambassador Von Bernstorff's note conservatively and with no enthusiasm. They pointed out that the memorandum referred only to liners and promised no concessions as to the torpedoing of merchantmen.

The Evening Star stood almost alone in accepting Von Bernstorff's assurances as sincere and lauded President Wilson's "slow, patient diplomacy."

German Diver Was Captured, Not Sunk

the stories in Liverpool, the officer said, the story of the capture of the submarine is being held up in the belief that Germany will issue a statement purporting to be the report of the commander of the vessel which sank the Arabic.

A number of distinguished Canadians, including Premier Borden, arrived on the Adriatic. The British financiers who are supposed to be coming to this country to deal with the situation growing out of the slump in sterling, were not aboard, however. Other British passengers expressed the opinion that they would arrive in Montreal on a warship.

R. B. Bennett, member of parliament, declared England was now prepared for a protracted period of war.

"The magnitude of the undertaking was a long time impressing itself on England," said Bennett, "but the country now knows, and is going about its task in a way that will win. The war has a long way to go, but there can be only one outcome."

Six Arabic survivors were aboard the Adriatic and more than 30 others arrived on the liner St. Paul. None of the passengers saw the torpedo which sank the Arabic. They said the liner was conveyed by three British destroyers from 2 o'clock on the afternoon of August 25, when she sailed, until 9 o'clock the next morning. Among the survivors was Dr. Aubrey Gaultier, who shared a cabin with Dr. Edmund Woods, one of the American victims. Mrs. Woods met Dr. Gaultier at the pier.

England Must Come To Terms Quickly Now

Washington, Sept. 1.—Germany having come to terms, it is now England's turn.

The administration will lose little time, it was learned this afternoon, in calling on Great Britain for satisfaction in the controversy over British interference with neutral commerce. It will take a few days to put the note to be sent to London in due form, it was stated, but the communication is now expected to be whipped into shape as the government has delayed action until it was known just what the Kaiser would say as to the submarine protests.

She unqualifiedly character of Germany's concessions are regarded as placing the administration in a strong position, it was understood and the message to the British foreign office, from all accounts will be vigorous and courteous, but as firm as any sent to Berlin.

SIGNE AUEN AND JOSEPH HENABERY IN "THE FOX WOMAN"

4-REEL MUTUAL MASTERPIECE MADE BY MAJESTIC

Special Trip To San Diego To Get Scenes For "The Fox Woman"

Through the efforts of Director Lloyd Ingraham arrangements were made whereby scenes for "The Fox Woman," the four-part Mutual Masterpiece, by Joan Luther Long, author of "Madam Butterfly," were photographed in a beautiful Japanese ten garden in San Diego, Cal. Director Ingraham took the whole company, including Signe Auen, Teddy Sampson, Elmer Clifton and the Japanese players especially engaged for this production, over to San Diego by motorcar. This unusual plan was adopted because of the hard, exacting work done by the players. Mr. Long's intensely dramatic story entailed a spending of nervous energy on the part of the actors that was quite unusual, and it was thought that they had earned and needed the change and recreation.

"The Fox Woman" will be shown at the Blich theater today and tomorrow and Saturday.

Cardinal Gibbons Will Discuss Peace Plans

Washington, Sept. 2.—That Cardinal Gibbons will discuss peace with President Wilson when he visits the White House at 2 o'clock this afternoon is considered a foregone conclusion. There could hardly be any other object in the interview, it was said. Whether the cardinal bears any definite peace program from the pope could not be verified, but this is regarded as a reasonable supposition.

If Cardinal Gibbons is to present a peace plan, officials do not believe it is based on the concessions made by Germany yesterday, as the appointment for today's interview was made before the state department knew of Ambassador Von Bernstorff's note. It was suggested that Germany might have given the Vatican a hint in advance as to the attitude of the imperial government, but this was not regarded as very probable inasmuch as such an intimation would have to be of the most informal character if the administration was not to be offended.

Before the cardinal called both the White House and state department were silent as to the purpose of the interview.

Will Discuss Mexico.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Secretary of State Lansing indicated that Cardinal Gibbons' prime subject in the conference with President Wilson this afternoon would be Mexico, by an announcement that the cardinal would confer with him after his interview at the White House.

Druggist Stole From Blind Man and Is Arrested

Portland, Ore., Sept. 2.—Alleged to have been in the habit of buying one or two five-cent cigars a day from Tom Long, a blind man, who conducts a stand in the city hall and then helping himself, John K. Haberly, aged 35, a druggist, was arrested today. Every city employee from the mayor down is highly incensed, as Blind Tom is a favorite with them.

Haberly is said to have confessed and admitted that he carried on the practice for months. Tom says he has lost more than 4000 cigars in the last year. He was discouraged because his stand showed no profit, although the sales were good.

Detective Hyde was summoned and, according to the police, caught Haberly taking advantage of Tom's misfortune.

Haberly is said to have told the police that he smoked part of the cigars alleged to have been stolen from the blind man, and sold the rest over the counters of his own drug store. His alleged thefts are also said to have included large quantities of chewing gum.

HOW SNIPPERS DIED

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 2.—Snippers is dead!

Snippers was just a little near-bull dog with some Irish Setter blood in his veins, but he was dear to the heart of William Tennyson, aged 12, who raised Snippers from puppyhood.

Snippers and William Tennyson went down town to buy a baseball bat and a dog collar with brass studs. An automobile crushed Snippers.

William Tennyson picked him up and ran to the receiving hospital.

The surgeons put him on the operating table. Snippers tried to laugh—a dog laugh, and he tried to wag his tail, but he couldn't, because his back was broken. So the doctors slipped an ether cap over Snippers' nose, chloroform dropped on it and William Tennyson watched wide-eyed.

"Doctor," he asked, "is—is he—will he get well?"

They took the ether cap off Snippers' nose. Snippers was dead. William Tennyson did not cry. But the doctors looked at him, and tiptoed softly from the operating room.

When they returned boy and dog were gone. Somebody ran to the door and peered. William Tennyson was far down the street, carrying over his shoulder all that was left of Snippers.
