The church was effectively decorated with delicate asters, forming an attractive setting for those who contributed of their talent to the pleasure of the evening. Mrs. Mary Raymond Selleck, of Portland, gave several readings, marked by high interpretative powers and a feeling for the balanced niceties of expression. Mrs. Selleck, whose personal charm contributes in no small way to the success of her work, has the ability of touching the impact whose personal charm contributes in no small way to the success of her work, has the ability of teaching the inmost springs of feeling and quickening to response the highest and best in the emotions of her audience. Especially was this last power evidenced in the reading 'Jean Val Dean and the Bishop.' by Victor Hugo. A humorous selection bringing out strong character interpretation was "Andrew Mae Choolen's Courtship." Other numbers of much merit on the program were the vocal selections by Miss Lucile Barto and her brother, Prank Barton. Miss Barton, who has recently arrived in Salem from New York, possesses a voice of remarkably even registrar taroughout, characterized by a beautiful tone quality. Miss Barton will open a studio in Salem this winter. Mr. Barton's numbers were also beautiful to the studies of the sale Barton's numbers were indicative of keen sympathetic powers, while his listeners sensed a highly individual charm of voice expression.
