SUBTERRANEAN WAR IN VERDUN REGION RELIANCE OF FRANCE

By William Phillips Sims. (United Press staff correspondent.) Copyright 1915 by the United Press. Copyright in Great Britain.

With the French Army at the front, Aug. 7.—(By mail)—France is putting her reliance in her men, her entanglements of special barbed wire of American make and in her series of marvelous trenches. No longer does she depend primarily upon her forts.

No better proof of this could be furnished than the act today of Military Governor Courtaeneau in showing me the secrets of the organization of the defenses of Verdun.

"The Germans have announced that Verdun is on the point of falling," a staff officer said. "We want you to have a look for yourself, then let us judge whether Verdun is in danger or not."

So saying, we visited places and saw things which no mere "civilian" had ever visited or been shown before. We went down winding stairs, down, down until I was dizzy, into the bowels of the earth under the forts; we ventured into the deepest of the dungeons where miles and miles of corridors are filled with miles of foodstuffs, ammunition and the like in broad, tall rows; we saw the general staff at work in some of these corridors now rigged up as offices; we saw the whole plant and lastly we were admitted to the underground retreat of the general.

"You may say," he said, "that we are prepared to defend this city until the last round of ammunition is gone and the last man dead."

The subterranean chambers of the citadel of Verdun can accommodate at least 50,000 people with the supplies necessary to their comparative comfort. In June the Germans shelled Verdun with 380 millimeter long-range guns, 20 shells falling on the town. Not much damage was done, but profiting by the experience of Dunkirk which was several times bombarded from a position of 20 miles away, the authorities at once set about making Verdun "safe." This was done by using the corridors and chambers under the citadel as a place to lodge the troops of the garrison and, if needs be, the civil population as well. These underground spaces date back for the most part about 30 years and are from 100 to 200 feet below the surface. They are cut almost entirely in rock but have false walls and ceilings of brick, with space

PARIS FASHION HINT Taffeta silk basque with ruffled skirt. Waist and lower half of sleeves faced with tulle silk finished off with tassels. Standing collar faced with white satin. Sensational Divorce Case Filed at Oregon City Oregon City, Ore., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Sherman A. Baldwin, who was Miss Sherman Dana, a popular Portland girl graduate of the Lincoln high school and who went to California last year as a star in moving pictures, is plaintiff in a sensational divorce case filed in the Clackamas county circuit court here today. Mrs. Baldwin alleges she married Claude A. Baldwin in San Francisco on March 17, 1914, and that on the wedding day he locked her in a room of an apartment house and tried to force her into a life of prostitution. After being subjected to treatment which wrecked her nerves, Mrs. Baldwin alleges she escaped from the apartment house next day and has seen her husband but once since then.
