New York, Sept. 15.—A number of important features in the general financial situation suggest improvement in sentiment. One is the progress already evident towards recovery in the sterling exchange situation, thus removing, in a corresponding degree, the recent incentive for liquidation by foreign holders of American securities. The arrival at this center of the able representatives of the British and French Treasuries and banking interests undoubtedly opens the door for improvement of a permanent character. Their object is to arrange for a substantial credit in this country on acceptable terms by means of which purchases of supplies may be paid for as deliveries are made. As so-called war supplies are constituting such an important factor in our export trade situation at the present time, there seems encouragement to believe that an adequate plan for measurably restoring the international exchange will soon be consummated in this direction.

It is true that there has been some recrudescence of the strain in diplomatic circles, resulting from the sinking of another liner under conditions against which our own government has protested. The Austrian ambassador, too, has unfortunately complicated affairs by his proposed campaign of interference with labor in industrial plants of the United States, and our government has been constrained to request his recall. But while these are developments that are to be deplored, any broad-minded view suggests clearly that their importance during current times of excitement is very apt to be overrated. War between the United States and any of the present warring nations is highly improbable. No one wants it and there is no incentive of a practical nature to bring it about. But until the war is ended it is not improbable that from time to time there will recur shocks resulting from the numerous causes that can appear so unexpectedly at inopportune moments. However, our national executive has shown such a commendable degree of calmness and firmness in connection with this war that it seems safe to presume that these various shocks will continue to be handled in a satisfactory way.

It seems fair to assume that we have not yet experienced the full volume of foreign liquidation. During the last two months especially this feature of the stock market has been exceptionally prominent. European centers are most probably today as bare of American securities as they have been at any time in many years. This in itself is by no means a depressing influence so far as our own market prospects are concerned. It is in fact a fundamental influence of strength. It means that the American savings have been steadily investing in securities that were formerly held abroad. The floating supplies have almost completely been returned to this side of the Atlantic. The movement began in earnest at the time of the Balkan wars. There since have been no repurchases of any important amounts. At the time of the offering of the latest British loan the privilege of converting consols and the older war loans into the new one called for the accumulation of a very large amount of ready cash. It was necessary in order to convert the older issues into the new loan to subscribe to "a" letter to an amount equal to that it was desired to convert. Hence British institutions as well as investors realized on their holdings of our securities as their quickest asset. There are still large amounts of American stocks and bonds held abroad. These comprise some of the very best of securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange. They are being eagerly purchased by American investors whenever offered at concessions and it may, I think, be taken for granted that they will continue in active demand. Thus there no longer is reason to fear the old time bogie of European liquidation. Tables have completely turned in the last year or so. Instead of fearing such liquidation it is being operated effectively, steadying our international exchanges.

Financial circles are beginning to feel the influence of the grain crops, which once more, considered as a whole, are to establish a new high level for American farm production. The wheat yield will not be far from a round billion bushels, a figure that has not heretofore been approached. The 1914 crop of 800,000,000 bushels was itself an unexampled one at that time. Corn if present prospects are confirmed has but once been exceeded, namely, by the 3,124,000,000-bushel crop of 1912. Oats have a yield considerably in excess of earlier years. Our wheat crop will be needed abroad and will be sold at prices based on the exigencies of war. There will be correspondingly large demands for other grain crops. Hence the grain export situation is one that merits careful consideration as a favoring factor in the stock exchange situation. The railroads are to have a large grain tonnage. There is in fact already a drift in market circles from the wild speculation that marked the so-called war stocks back to the railroads and to more conservative trading as a whole. There are also heavy yields of hay and fruit. Nature has indeed smiled once more upon the American farmer, whose products this year are estimated at about $10,000,000,000, and this in spite of the lower prices sometimes resulting from this self-same bounty. The only notable exception is cotton, which has been adversely affected by the war. The situation is not as bad, however, as is made to appear in political circles, for the contraband problem has been much clarified and the loss to German and Austrian consumption, amounting to nearly 3,000,000 bales is compensated for by the smaller crop and the immense quantities used in the manufacture of explosives. Traffic in the west is already increasing owing to the grain movement, but exports of the latter are still under the influence of the exchange situation and the certainty of a big rush of Russian grain when the Bardiannelos are opened.

Industrial activity thus far has been confined chiefly to the iron trade which is sustaining its reputation of being either prince or pauper. Just now it is decidedly the former. Our steel plants are now raking in nearly full capacity and prices are steadily rising. Of course this is almost entirely due to war orders, which means that such prosperity is purely ephemeral unless it is

IT'S hard to show Nature anything about curing tobacco. So we have adopted Nature's own way to make VELVET the smoothest smoking tobacco—slow, patient ageing.

Men may "process," but they can't put into tobacco any finer pipe qualities than those Kentucky's limestone soil so richly gives to the Burley de Luxe.

But these qualities can be improved. They are brought out in their fullness in the aged-in-the-wood mellowness of cool, slow-burning VELVET.

For two years the finest Burley leaf remains in sealed wooden casks, and then only is it ready to be made into VELVET.

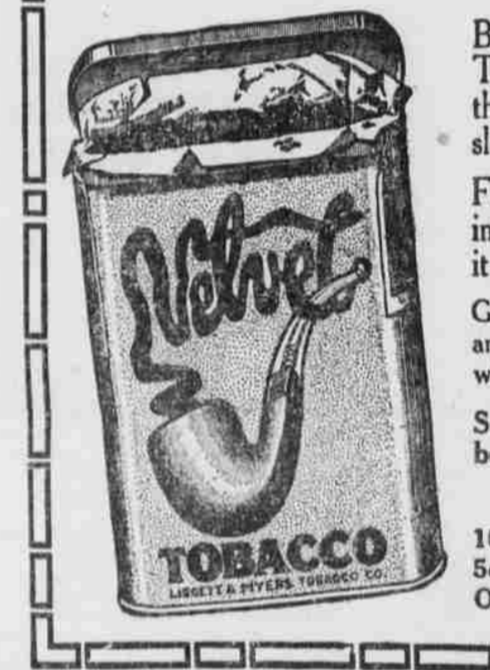

Get your tin now—join the growing ranks of the army who have found VELVET tobacco a delight without a single drawback.

Investigation of Arson Trust Has Commenced

Portland, Ore., Sept. 15.—Investigation by the grand jury of an arson plot resulted today in the issuing of an indictment against Sanford W. Currier, a building contractor, who is in jail accused of setting fire to his house here in August, 1912.

Several other men are accused in connection with the alleged state-wide arson ring, but only one, Grant Hawley, has been arrested.

Currier is said to have confessed to District Attorney Evans that he made a fairly profitable business of building houses and burning them for the past ten years. His operations, it is asserted, have extended over California, Oregon and Washington. Out of a half dozen specific cases, the grand jury selected one on which to indict Currier. In this case he is said to have obtained $3,000 from the Oregon Fire Relief association.

New Orleans States: It is no violation of confidence to say that in spite of President Wilson's desire to remain at peace with all the world, the American people are already preparing to absorb a large part of turkey on November 23.

Expansion of Business Menaces This Country

San Francisco, Sept. 15.—A great expansion, or extension of business, local, national and foreign, and a feeling of over-confidence inspired by the plethora of money resulting from European war expenditures in this country were declared today to be the most potent factors menacing the future prosperity of America, by Arthur Reynolds, first vice-president of the Continental Commercial bank of Chicago, who is here from the bankers' association at Seattle.

"A great many people anticipate an era of unprecedented prosperity after the close of the war," said Reynolds. "There will be a first flush, followed by a gradual readjustment of conditions in all countries of the world which will have its effect on America. For a time we will feel the lack of gold in European countries, and their shortage of exports, which they are enabled to buy in the American market. After that, in my opinion, there will follow the greatest era of prosperity ever experienced in America.

"Lumber, your greatest product on the Pacific coast, is and has been in a bad way, but except for this the Pacific coast is in an excellent condition, as compared with the other sections of the country. I find your crops good, your business men and bankers optimistic and confident. The Pacific coast is bound to benefit from the accumulation of money in the east and the great increase in industrial activities resulting from larger sales due to the war."

Oregon Pioneer Dies.

Peter Hurie, founder and ex-president of the Bank of Brownsville, in Linn county, where he had lived during thirty-six years of his forty-eight years of continuous residence in Oregon; ex-president of the Brownsville Woolen Mills and founder and president of the Bank of Sellwood, died early Sunday at his home, 567 Nehalem avenue, in Portland. He had been ill only two weeks. Until the last few days his condition had not seemed serious.
