Three Hop Houses Burn Near Eugene

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 25.—Three hop houses at the Bushnell hop yard were destroyed by fire early today, supposed to be of incendiary origin. Seven hop houses have been burned near Eugene within the past two weeks, all of which are said to have been caused by incendiaries.

The theory has been advanced that these fires are a part of a campaign of destruction inaugurated in California by migratory workers.

Edward Bushnell, who, with his brother, William Bushnell, owns the hop houses burned today, declared that he was warned that the buildings would be burned, but that he disregarded the warnings. There had been no fires near the buildings for several weeks, he said.

The hops at the Bushnell yards escaped destruction. The entire crop had been placed in the cooler, near the drying house, and because of the absence of wind the flames did not spread to this building. Last week three hop houses on the John M. Edmundson farm, three-fourths of a mile east of Goshen, and a hop drier, at the W. R. Hughes place, on Goodpasture Island, burned. A few nights before a man was seen at the Palmer Brothers' hop yards, near Springfield, crawling on hands and knees toward the buildings, and was frightened away by one of the employes in the yard, who fired several shots at the figure in the dark.

Students Lyceum Course

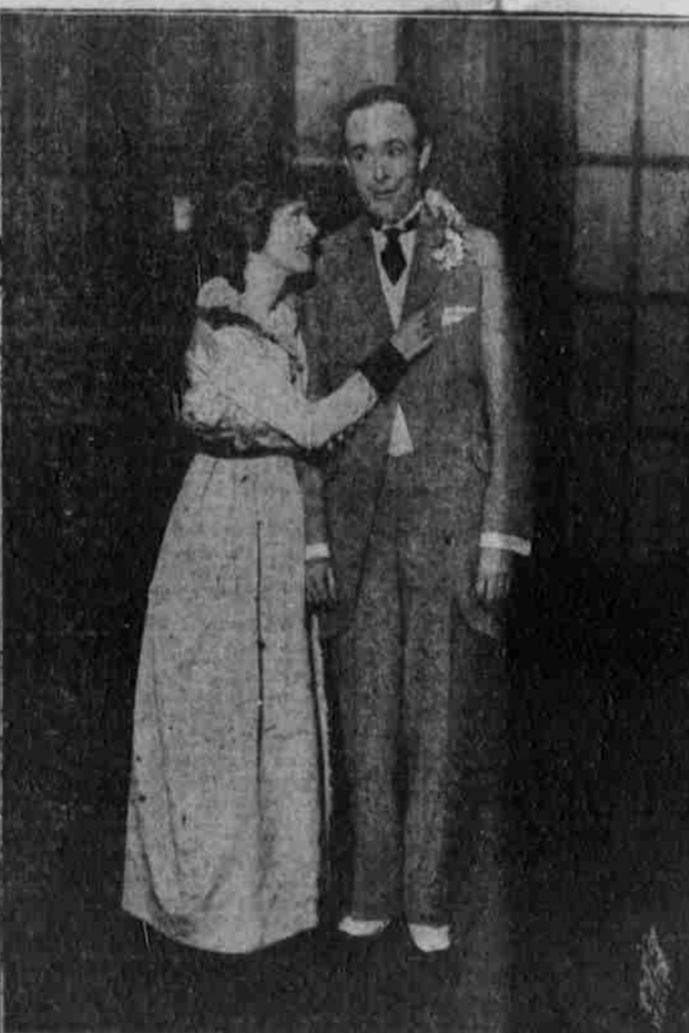

Metropolitan Quartet

NO Lyceum quartet has won more hearty encomiums than has the Metropolitan Grand Quartet, a stellar attraction on the local Lyceum course. For five seasons the personnel has remained unchanged, and the quartet has been acclaimed one of the greatest combinations of male voices ever heard on the platform. Each member of this great company is a singer of established renown, capable of giving an entire concert engagement alone. The personnel is as follows: Charles L. Neth, lyric tenor; Paul Chase, robust tenor; John Eberly, baritone, and Thomas Wade Lane, basso. Mrs. Willo Page Lane is the pianist and accompanist of the company.

The members of this great organization are big men, mentally and physically. They sing the best music and sing it faultlessly. Withal, they sing with such a perfect understanding and appreciation of their art that their work appeals to critic and layman alike. Extended platform experience has added natural gifts and splendid musical training, and they give a concert which will thoroughly please any music loving community.

FAMOUS PLAY AND PLAYERS COMING

Old friends put salt into the days of living. Old plays that refresh the spirit, tired and dried by the driving winds of our time, are to human nature what the dew of springtime are to the green things of hill and plain. Neither are so many, nor so closely grown, one can be indifferent without loss. He who does not know these joys is poor, indeed.

All who have tasted much of the sweets of the theatre have treasured thoughts of plays and players. A character has been made to live in memory by the appealing qualities of flesh and blood, and the varying elements of a romantic story have stirred the sympathy, the depths of our nature in a way that cannot be forgotten. The rarity of this experience commends the cause and instills a kindly feeling that never passes.

Hence it is that the heart grows warm when the news is spread that Bronson Howard's master piece of comedy writing, "The Henrietta," is to be performed for us at the Grand Opera House, September 27, by an acting cast that is rightly described "All Star." Such beloved and famous players as William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Naelyn Arbutckle, Laura Hope Crews and Mabel Taliaferro are personally portraying the pungently humorous and thrilling features of the remarkable piece. No story of American life prepared for the stage has so deftly and attractively fulfilled its mission as "The Henrietta." The blood of healthful human nature runs through its veins, and its characters are of the place, time and people we know. To sit under the spell of its development is to make the future bad going for plays that are built in the quicksands of low living. Its fun is as pure and natural as the water from a rock spring, and its sentiment as pure and engaging as the greeting of a child. The characters are strong and convincing, the scenes swimming with action, and not a moment of time or word of speech is without a keen edge of interest.

The wiles of Wall Street, the shams of art-tourney, the stress of the right living, the springtime bloom of affectionate youth, the mellowed liking of tempered age, the whirlwind of error and the harvest of truth are the seeds of fascinating moods and scenes in this great play. The leading roles are rich with opportunity for the highest acting skill and rendered by this all star cast the performance has aroused a critical praise unequalled since the revival of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's classical comedy, "The Rivals," with Joseph Jefferson, W. J. Florence and William H. Crane in the cast. Joseph Brooks organized that celebrated company and directed the tour, which he is repeating now with "The Henrietta" and the five stars, William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Naelyn Arbutckle, Amelia Bigham and Mabel Taliaferro.

McElroy's Famous Band at State Fair on Monday

Conductor McElroy's famous Portland band will arrive in this city Monday morning for performance during the week of the state fair. A concert will be given the people at Commercial and State streets every day at noon. This organization has just closed a very successful season playing Portland parks and the Oaks in its fourth consecutive season. It is said that this band is the most popular organization ever presented to the public in the entire northwest. The visitors at the state fair will be given the pleasure of listening to the same delightful programs which attracted so much favorable comment in Portland this summer. The band has been augmented by some eight or 10 soloists of national reputation. Conductor McElroy has had the distinction of playing the state fair as a band leader more times than any other leader, this being his eighth consecutive season, excepting one intervening season. The popularity of the McElroy program is a standing attestation to the high standard of his performers. The people

Spaulding Will Exhibit "Easybilt" Barn at Fair

The drawings of a model barn, to be termed Spaulding's "Easybilt" will be on exhibition at the state fair in the building occupied by the Spaulding Logging Co. The drawings and specifications are by Architect George M. Post, and have been worked out from various different barns and include the best ideas in modern barn building. Before the drawings were made, hundreds of farmers were consulted for the best ideas in barn structure, and with these ideas, the Spaulding Logging Co. is now ready to build the ideal barn. E. B. Smith, who has charge of the site exhibit and sectional garage exhibit at the fair, will show and explain the drawings.

The smallest barn to be built is 36 by 42½ feet, with a capacity of 12 tons of hay. It is made for seven cows and four horses, or can be arranged into a dairy barn for 14 cows. It is so arranged that sections of 14 feet can be added at any time.

It has been successfully demonstrated that the Willamette valley will produce as good corn as any section in the country, and these shows are held for the purpose of showing the aptness as well as for getting together a fine display for the county show to be held at Salem about December first, when the best will be chosen to be sent to the national corn show to be held at St. Paul, Minn., in December.—Independent.

Duke's "Velvet Joe" Window

"The Duke's" cigar store on South Commercial street is showing a "Velvet Joe" display window which is attracting much attention. A former Salem boy, W. Eckhart, who is here this week in the interest of the Liggett & Myers company, assisted in putting up the display. As usual in all advertisements of Velvet smoking tobacco, "Velvet Joe" is much in evidence. He looks like a real native of Kentucky, and the company claims that Velvet Joe is a reality. Anyhow, several good sayings are attributed to him, one of which is that "a woman is as old as she looks, a man is as old as he feels, and a pipe is as old as it tastes."
