YOUNG ROCKEFELLER ARRIVES IN DENVER

He Will Emphasize the Fact That He Now Heads Family Interests

Denver, Colo., Sept. 28.—Refreshed by a night's rest on J. F. Welborn's ranch, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. arrived here today for a conference with officials of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company and perhaps with a committee from the United Mine Workers.

During the week, Rockefeller is expected to emphasize, first, that he, and not his father is now active head of the Rockefeller interests, and second that the policies toward the miners are those of the son, not the father. In this connection, it was said a new "paternalistic" era has begun.

The new era probably will not provide for union recognition, though it includes some reforms that the unions seek. Finally, the new head expects to play a greater personal part in the actual conduct of affairs in the Colorado mines than did Rockefeller, Sr. This role had its inception in the young man's inspection trip the past week.

That the son is now active head is shown by his visit here despite the elder Rockefeller's advice to the contrary; by his thorough investigation; and by official obsequies to him.

The senior Rockefeller's age, and his proclivities for golf instead of business, it is pointed out, mark his retirement from actual direction.

Asked today what good he expected to come from his trip, Rockefeller begged to be excused. When told that he was charged with making the inspection merely for publicity purposes, he answered:

"I believe you newspapermen realize it was not simply a publicity affair. The new era of paternalism was tacitly admitted by members of the official party in citing that measures for more intimate control of the miners' lives, such as making new houses, parks, gardens, club houses, had been undertaken because he believed the miners could not take care of themselves."

Supt. Harry Minto Killed by Convict

state has lost one of its very best citizens," said Governor Withycombe this morning. "And the prisoners at the penitentiary have lost their best friend. Harry Minto was as fair as he was fearless, and everyone in Marion county knows he feared nothing. I am shocked and sincerely grieved at this sad tragedy, which to me is a real personal loss, as the more I saw of Mr. Minto the more I respected and liked him. Affairs at the penitentiary were just rounding up into excellent shape and under Mr. Minto's capable administration great progress would have been seen at the institution."

Warden Minto's Record.

Warden Minto was an appointee of Governor Withycombe and began his office shortly after the governor took the helm of the state. Mr. Minto went east with Sheriff Each to return A. B. Cook, who was wanted in this city for obtaining money under false pretenses and was captured in Brooklyn, New York. At that time Mr. Minto visited a number of prisons in the east and adopted a number of new ideas in prison management which were put into effect at the Oregon prison.

Previous to his appointment Mr. Minto had served four years as sheriff of this county and also as deputy sheriff. He was formerly with James Culver in the Northwest Mounted Police of Canada where he made an enviable reputation.

Mr. Minto was 51 years old, having been born in Marion county in October, 1864. He is survived by his widow, whom he married about twenty-five years ago and who before her marriage was Miss Jessie Glenn, a daughter of a pioneer family. They had no children. He has two brothers and a sister: D. C. Minto of 821 Saginaw street of this city; Mrs. R. V. Halley, 240 South Twenty-first street, Salem, and John W. Minto, now of Portland, but formerly of Salem. Harry Minto was chief of police of Salem, 1892 to 1896, and sheriff of Marion county for two terms, going out of office in 1910. He was a son of John Minto, one of Oregon's best known pioneers who died in January of this year.

The funeral will be in charge of the Salem Elks B. P. O. E. 336 and final arrangements will be announced later.

Poses On the Trail.

Albany, Or., Sept. 28.—Despite the efforts of more than 200 armed and determined men, no trace had been found today of Otto Hooker, the escaped convict who shot and killed Harry Minto, superintendent of the State penitentiary two miles east of here at midnight last night, two hours after he had perhaps fatally wounded City Marshal J. J. Benson of Jefferson.

The county around the scene of the shooting of Minto is alive with armed men and automobile loads of possemen are leaving here constantly.

A telegram has been sent to the Washington State penitentiary at Walla Walla asking that bloodhounds be sent but no reply has yet been received.

The penitentiary guards say that Hooker is in fine physical condition and capable of walking sixty miles a day. If able to cover his tracks he may escape.

The belief prevails here that Hooker has already passed through Albany and is on his way south.

Several prison guards passed through this city in an automobile shortly before 10 o'clock for Harrisburg to organize posse and search the surrounding territory.

May Have Escaped.

Portland, Or., Sept. 28.—The crew of an Oregon Electric train reported to the police that a man answering the description of Otto Hooker, the escaped convict who shot and killed Superintendent Minto of the Oregon penitentiary had ridden to Portland with them early this morning.

The man, they said, roughly clothed and out of breath, boarded the train at Devors station, two miles from the place where Minto was shot to death.

Deputy Sheriff Christofferson of Portland left for Albany at noon with a bloodhound belonging to Patrolman Long of the Portland police department. Long accompanied him.

At the request of Governor Withycombe, Colonel C. R. Veaves of Portland, at the head of a posse of 16 men, started out to search for Superintendent Minto, the posse will work in connection with the sheriff's office and is prepared to remain out all night if Hooker is not caught before then.

Arrested In Pendleton.

Pendleton, Or., Sept. 28.—Otto Hooker, who is being sought by posse near Albany for shooting and killing Superintendent Minto of the State penitentiary, was arrested here September 29, 1914, while heavily armed. In his possession were a number of articles stolen in a series of burglaries during the Round-up.

When arraigned he pleaded guilty to attempted burglary and was sentenced to the penitentiary to from one and two and a half years. He was committed to the state prison November 6.

Hooker's home is in Wichita, Kansas. He had served a term in the Whittier, California, reform school.

BATTLE CONTINUES ALONG WEST FRONT WITH FRENCH GAINS

By William Phillip Simms. (United Press staff correspondent.)

Paris, Sept. 28.—The greatest battle of the year along the western battle front is raging today even more furiously than when the great conflict began three days ago.

Staggering the Germans with one mighty smash, the allies withdrew and reformed their lines for another blow. This move explained today the apparent slackening noted in the official communique yesterday. The second stroke was dealt last night, heavy infantry attacks following the hail of artillery.

The Germans are yielding yard by yard in the Champagne battling bravely, but they are being moved down under the massed French bayonet attacks. The Teutons made an attempt to stem the French onrush by flooding their patch with clouds of asphyxiating gases. Winds, however, swept these away immediately.

The chalky hills of the Champagne are throwing up white clouds of dust under the hammering of heavy shells. The dead and wounded are mangled with the white powder, splashed crimson with their life blood.

General Von Fabeck's German forces in the Champagne are rattling bitterly to save Bazancourt-Argonne railway to which they have been moving since Saturday. The French, however, have maintained their gains, and have improved their positions to meet the Teutonic counter assaults.

To the north the British are progressing under enormous difficulties. The Germans' strongest defenses run from Arras to the sea. Against these the British have been remarkably successful.

After the first shock of battle, Crown Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria, rushed up reserves and asked reinforcements. He then attempted a counter attack. General French's men, however, have repulsed these moves thus far, and in addition have maintained their gains and improved their hold before Lens by capturing additional sections of the German battle line.

The British and French together have captured upwards of 70 German field guns and heavy pieces.

The French losses are understood to be surprisingly small in view of the fact that everywhere General Joffre's men are on the offensive. This was held to be due to the fact that preparatory artillery fire had previously wrecked the German trenches.

Wounded soldiers arriving here reported that for several hours Saturday they fought in a driving rain, drenched to the skin. Adding to their discomfort, a high wind raked the battle line from Flanders to the Vosges.

"Nevertheless my men laughed at these things," said an officer, "because they were at last turned loose to bite their way through the 'boches.'"

Military critics were elated because the men were not taken ill from the effects after a year of inaction in the trenches.

Warning the people against having too high expectations from the re-awakened offensive, the Temps today said:

"We believe a general offensive is about to materialize. It is obvious that the Germans will immediately reinforce threatened points, but thus weaken others. This will draw new offensive actions from the allies where they are now inactive."

Girls Hold Firemen Too Tight When They Are Being Rescued

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—The work of fire ladders in rescuing girls from burning buildings is hampered by the fact that the girls hold the firemen too tight when they are being carried down the ladders, said Fire Chief Dowell of Portland today at the 22nd annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Fire Chiefs, meeting in the civic auditorium.

"A girl shouldn't take advantage of a fireman just because he has both hands busy on the rungs of the fire ladder and hug the breath out of him," said Fire Chief Dowell.

"A girl in such a position should loop her arms lightly but firmly about the fireman's neck and if there is any hugging to be done leave that to the fireman."

Fire Chief Stetson of Seattle gave out five don'ts for the prevention of fires in homes. If they were followed, he said the number of fires in the United States would be cut down 30 per cent, they are:

"Don't let the kids play with matches.

"Don't let oily rags lay around the house.

"Don't let chimneys get dirty.

"Don't go away and leave your electric flat iron connected.

"Don't monkey with live wires."

A big percentage of the fires that destroy homes are caused by an arsonist that extends all over the United States and in order to combat both the fires and the rings a fire chief should be as good a detective as he is a fire fighter, F. H. Grinnell of Seattle said.

"A man at the head of a fire department ought to know how to do a little detective work on the side in order to aid in breaking up these rings," said Grinnell.
