ESTATE

"DEATH to dust" is the twentieth-century slogan of all women who are interested in the sanitation of their homes, especially so far as the kitchen is concerned. And hidden dust is even more obnoxious than the kind that collects in plain view.

The New Real Estate Steel Range

means death to the dust that is bound to collect under the ordinary steel range, whose base rests almost on the floor. It's built the sanitary, sensible, scientific way—high and dry off the floor. The sturdy cast iron legs give it a solid foundation, yet leave plenty of

This new feature was the only thing left to be done that could add to the convenience and cleanliness of this splendid steel range. In all other respects, it's the same honest, handsome, reliable Real Estate, with its dozen distinct and important improvements, and its cooking conveniences that do away with all drudgery in cooking.

See the new Real Estate at our store; let us explain its splendid qualities; and we feel sure that you too, will decide to "Own an Estate."

It is now heater time. The cold, wet days will call for a little heat for the living rooms. We have a large stock of different styles of heaters for all kinds of fuel. You will find our prices lower than usual.

THE MARKETS

Market conditions are about the same as yesterday. While there has been some wheat buying in the east, there has been but little movement of the grain on the coast, and the price holds around 72 to 75 cents.

Eggs show a change. The market seems steady and the price has settled down for the present to a 30 cent basis.

Following the decline in the wholesale price of sugar, the retail price will be reduced next Monday.

MISS CLEO DAVENPORT KILLED.
Los Angeles, Oct. 1.—Miss Cleo Davenport, sister of the late Homer Davenport, famed cartoonist, is dead, and her fiancé, Frank Travers, first assistant to the general passenger agent of the Panama-Pacific steamship line, is in a precarious condition as the result of injuries sustained when the couple were run down late last night by an unidentified automobile on a downtown street.

Her death occurred soon after she was taken to the receiving hospital. Travers sustained a fractured skull and other injuries, from which recovery is doubtful, according to physicians at the hospital where he also was taken.

Miss Davenport and Travers, whose marriage was to have taken place in the winter, were strolling near the Hotel Lexington, where Miss Davenport was staying with her mother and two sisters, when the accident occurred.

Police were notified when a drug-gist telephoned headquarters and said that an auto had stepped into the store, several blocks from the accident, and casually remarked that two persons had been hurt in an accident "up the street."

Miss Davenport came here following the death of Homer Davenport, from Silverton, Oregon, the home of the family for many years.

The finding of the commission was based on the physical value of the Hubbard and Woodburn lines, not from the standpoint of original cost of construction at this time and present value.—Hubbard Enterprise.

STATE NEWS

STATE NEWS
Roseburg Review: S. P. Dunn, a well known resident of Roseburg, today brought to the Review office a copy of the "Western Spy" which was printed in Cincinnati on Saturday, December 21, 1911, nearly 104 years ago. Although showing the effects of its advanced age in some respects, the paper is still in a fair state of preservation. It is highly cherished by the owner. According to Mr. Dunn, the paper has been in his possession for more than 25 years. Before that time it was in the hands of his parents and grandparents.

Rogue River Courier: The vineyards of Tokay and Malaga grapes set out in the Grants Pass district during the last few years are just now coming into mature bearing, and for the first time in its history car shipments of grapes will go forward from this city. The first full car will be billed out Thursday, and it will be followed by from six to eight more during the season, while many thousands of crates of the luscious fruit will be shipped out by express.

The rise of a new and valuable agricultural side line in central Oregon is foreshadowed in this item in the Lakeview Examiner: "Fred Chartrand, who has a ranch about 12 miles west of Plush, is attempting to get some quick growing hardwood that will furnish fuel, posts and other necessities on a ranch. This year he planted the catalpa but none of the seed came up. Next year he is going to experiment with box elder, locust and black cherry."

Farewell to summer, as spoken by the Lebanon Express: "Summer has gone and the advent of autumn has been heralded with clear skies and a hint of frost in the air that is tinting the leaves and causing them to cling less securely to the boughs. For the farmers it has been a busy and profitable season, and the people of Linn county have reason to be glad that they live in this land of peace and plenty."

"The success of the Round-Up this year," prophesies the East Oregonian, "indicates the great show may be made a success for some years to come if handled with the same efficiency shown this year and in past years and if Happy Canyon or some other live, attractive evening entertainment is maintained to keep the crowd interested at night."

Albany's Dollar Day prospects as estimated by the Democrat: "The Democrat's Dollar Day is developing into a regular humdinger. Practically every merchant in the city has signed up to put up a big dollar value on October 14 and the whole town, commercially speaking, is getting ready for the big event."

Canyon City Eagle: Herman Kuhl killed a tawny lynx in the Pine creek country a few days ago. These animals are somewhat rare, though the bobcat, which closely resembles them, is very common.

J. S. Wellington announces in the Bay City Examiner that he has "again taken over the paper and will publish it from now on."

TRAINING SCHOOL BOYS HAD FINE EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Supt. Hale Shows Just What the Boys
Are Doing—Make Their Own Clothes and Shoes.

"They just got in the wrong crowd, that's all. They are the average boys, but got in wrong."

In this way, superintendent Will S. Hale sums up the general average of boys in the Oregon Training School, of which he has about 115 under his charge at present. Feeling that the average boy is not really a bad human specimen, but just needs directing, the superintendent treats them as if they were the average boy, but in need of a little personal supervision to keep them on the right track.

According to Mr. Hale, he is not in charge of a reform school. Nothing of the kind. His is a training school, where the boys are kept busy working, working on the farm, in the shop or at the bench.

The average man in observing the display of the state training school in the new pavilion at the state fair grounds, would hardly think that the boys who were working at the bench on shoes, making clothes and another working at a sewing machine, could have been taken out of what the average person considers a reform school. But Mr. Hale says it never was, or is, or ever will be what is commonly considered a reform school. Nothing of the kind.

It is a training school that maintains a discipline equal to that of any public school, with the advantage that the boys know there is no such thing as idleness. That word isn't in their dictionary.

At the fair grounds exhibit the boys are making shoes, making and printing cards. Within a short time after entering the school, each boy is set to work. All the shoes worn, and all the clothes made by the boys. One boy who had been in the training school but two months had made a fairly presentable pair of shoes, at least adapted for work in the fields.

Each day during the fair, Mr. Hale brought different boys to the exhibit to show what they had been doing and could do. The exhibit showed that at the boy, who had got in bad on account of evil companions, was now busy with a practical occupation. The tailoring department includes all the clothes worn by the boys, shirts, underwear and even gloves. And when a boy shows by his conduct that he is entitled to a parole, he is sent home in a new suit of clothes that has been made in the school.

On display were not only shoes, clothing, shirts and underwear worn by the boys, but even canned fruits and canned garden products. Four tons of string beans were dried by the boys this summer, besides farm products of all kinds put up for the winter.

The display this year at the fair grounds, has brought to the tax payers and general public, the actual work taught at the school," said Mr. Hale. "Many are surprised at the quality of the work done, even people living in Salem. It is even thought by many, that the boys are confined and punished, and are surprised to find a company of boys who are happy in their work, and developing a character. These boys will be good average citizens."

In fact, the average time spent by any of the boys in the school, is but one year, and before they are paroled, they earn it by their good behavior and general disposition to do what is right. Most of the boys are all right. They just got in the wrong crowd."
