McKinley School Building Represents Latest Ideas

The McKinley school building, representing the very latest ideas in modern school construction, is one of which every citizen of Salem, whether interested in schools or not, should be proud, from the fact that in architectural beauty and detail of construction, it is surpassed by none on the coast. And more than that, it was constructed at practically the contractor's bid of $20,128, as the extras have amounted to but $50, a fact that is remarkable, considering the experiences of the past in school as well as in business construction.

Designed by Architect George M. Post, the building is regarded as much the best in this district, and has been constructed with economy and efficiency.

With eight rooms capable of accommodating 35 or more pupils each, the building can easily take care of over 300 pupils. For this semester, only the lower four rooms are in use, although the upper four are finished, and need only the placing of desks.

In all the rooms, the color scheme is in buff and browns with the work finished in a light oak stain. Another feature that is especially appreciated by the teachers, is the fact that each room is supplied with the best slate black boards that are on the market, made at Statington, Pa. These boards are the best in the city, and in fact, there are none better on the coast. Another detail of this modern school building, is the fan system of hot air heating and ventilating, with thermostatic control. This obviates the necessity of raising windows to secure more fresh air, as in days of yore, or of regulating the heat by registers in the room. By this new system, the temperature of each room is recorded in the furnace room, and the temperature of from 65 to 70 degrees is easily maintained by the janitor.

Other conveniences are the speaking tube from each room to the janitor, book cases and cupboards in rooms and hall ways, and extra large cloak rooms, each lighted by a special window. Hose and fire extinguishers are on each floor, and adequate fire escapes, and the circulating water system gives hot and cold water. The three large entrances give easy access to the building. Playgrounds, 27 1-2 by 37 1-2 feet are allotted one each for the boys and girls on the ground floor. Included also in the building, is a special room for the principal, and on the upper floor, a room of the same size, to be used later as a library or rest room.

The attendance at present is 84, but with those who will come from the Lincoln school, the average will be close to 100 for this semester. All grades from the first up to, and including the sixth grade, is taught in this school. Miss Emma Kramer, who is so enthusiastic over her new surroundings, is principal, and also teaches in the second grade. Miss Delta Dillard has charge of the first primary, Miss Lulu Dalton of the fourth and fifth grades and Miss Emma Bushnell of the sixth grade.

At the close of the public schools on the evening of September 30, the total attendance was 2791. One the first of June this year, the attendance was 2534. It seems that the boys this year are after the higher education instead of dropping out, as of the increased attendance, compared to last June, 94 are boys and 73 are girls.

Of the 2791 pupils in the schools October 1, the girls have only the small majority of 22, which is a better proportion for the boys than at any time in the history of the schools. The report issued at the close of the month by Superintendent Elliott shows the pupils are divided according to age as follows: Over 4 and under 6 years, none. Over 6 and under 9, boys 321, girls 297.

Over 9 and under 12, boys 343, girls 370. Over 12 and under 14, boys 255, girls 252. Over 14 and under 20, boys 421, girls 451. Over 20 years of age boys 14, girls 6. It is especially gratifying to the superintendent and to the school board to note the larger attendance of boys in the higher grades.

Ordinarily, the boys begin dropping out as they reach the high school. But it is noticeable the boys this year are but very little outnumbered in higher grades. Of pupils over 14 years of age, the boys number 433 and girls 457, a difference of but 22 in favor of the girls. Parents are making a good record this year in visiting, as during the eight school days in September, 96 parents visited the schools.
