Germans Will Possess Country From Odessa to the Persian Gulf and Egypt

By Carl W. Ackerman

The battered little steamer that was the only Anglo-Saxon left in this corner of the battered and bloodied world was a pitiful sight yesterday, but it was victorious in the struggle with the German armies, as the Americans who rode in her to turn back the advance at the battles of Saint-Mihiel and Combles found. She was a prize of war, and her captain and crew were hailed as heroes by their Allies. The victory was a turning point in the war, and it will be a time to remember when the battle is over.

The American steamer was one of the ships that were captured by the Germans as they advanced into France. She was the only one of the ships that was not destroyed, and she was a prize of war. The Germans had captured her and had used her as a means of transportation for their troops.

She was a small vessel, but she was well armed. She had a machine gun on the deck, and she had a number of small arms in the hold. She was a fast vessel, and she was able to escape from the German forces as they advanced.

She was the only ship that was not destroyed, and she was able to make her way back to the American lines. She was a prize of war, and she was hailed as a hero by the Americans who rode in her.

The victory was a turning point in the war, and it will be a time to remember when the battle is over.

The Balkan War is over, and the peace is uncertain. The peace is a mistake, and it is a mistake that may be fatal to the interests of the Balkan States.

The Treaty of Neuilly was signed in 1918, and it was a treaty that was signed by the Allies and the Central Powers. The treaty was a peace treaty, and it was a peace treaty that was signed by the Allies and the Central Powers.

The treaty was a peace treaty, and it was a peace treaty that was signed by the Allies and the Central Powers. The treaty was a peace treaty, and it was a peace treaty that was signed by the Allies and the Central Powers.

The Balkan States were pages of the Central Powers, and they were pages of the Central Powers. The Balkan States were pages of the Central Powers, and they were pages of the Central Powers.
