In his address at the Congregational church last evening, before the Pilgrim's club, Superintendent Hale, of the Oregon state training school, stated that the great majority of boys got into trouble through selling junk. After picking up a few pieces of old iron or discarded articles and receiving money for them from the junk shops, the boys soon failed to distinguish between the worthless junk and materials that were of value, and eventually took whatever they could get, regardless of where or how. The feeling that the junk man would not inform the officers, also did much in getting boys started on the wrong road.

PERFECTING THE FLAWS FOR FIRST MARKET DAY

Agricultural Department of Commercial Club Arranging for Market and Auction

Arrangements are being made for the first market day to be held next Saturday, under the auspices of the agricultural department of the Commercial Club, with a special committee consisting of W. S. Low, L. H. McMahon and L. P. Aldrich in charge.

Everything that a farmer produces and everything in the way of live stock will be sold at auction on that day, which legally cannot be put up at auction. But cattle may be sold at private sale, so they can be disposed of, as well as farm implements and anything the farmer possesses.

The sale will begin at 9:30 o'clock in the Waring barn on Liberty street. H. E. Voorheis has been secured to act as auctioneer.

At the close of the auction, an address will be made by Duncun M. Marshall, minister of agriculture of the province of Alberta, Canada. Mr. Marshall is a man who can interest his hearers for hours at a time, knows what he is talking about and has a message that may be valuable to the farmers of this community. He has been invited to deliver an address at Corvallis, and those in charge of the market day feel fortunate in securing a man of his prominence and ability as a speaker for the opening of the market.

The booths on Liberty and Ferry street will be open for those who have produce to sell and Saturday will undoubtedly be a good market day for vegetables, fruits and other farm products.

In order that those in charge of the market may advertise and properly prepare for the auction, the managers suggest that every thing to be sold should be registered with the Commercial Club.

FIFTY THOUSAND FIGHT FOR ADMISSION TO GAME

For Two Blocks Around Park Gates a Struggling, Billowing Sea of New Englanders Crowded and Squirmed Towards the Box Office and Thousands of These Were Disappointed

By George R. Holmes.
(United Press staff correspondent.)

Braves' Field, Boston, Mass., Oct. 12.—Approximately 50,000 supposedly said New Englanders fought and scratched their way into Braves' Field between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. today to witness the attempt of the on-rushing Red Sox to drive a third spike into a world's championship.

And it was some fight. For two blocks around the park gates a struggling sea of humanity wormed its tedious way toward the box office. Thousands were to be disappointed as admissions were at a premium.

Speculators, who yesterday did well to break even, made money today. Nobody worked in Boston today, but the ball players. It was a holiday. Something over 400 years ago Old Chris Columbus found America. Boston today is confident that a world's baseball championship has found her again after a three-year absence. Therefore, Boston celebrated.

There was music galore—stringed, instrumental and choral. Three bands played the huge throng into its seats. The club furnished one, the Royal Rooters another and an added starter made its appearance among a crowd of 700 gay uniformed postmen, which occupied a block of seats back of third base. Each postman was equipped with a scarlet Boston banner, making the section a flaring square against a sombre hued background.

A kilted quintet of bagpipers added its weird whining to the crashing of trio bands. The bleachers staged singing contests back and forth across the field, using "Tipperary" as the vehicle. The crowd did not care. It was a holiday, and besides Boston was winning. Moreover, it was a day picked out of June and transplanted into autumn. Boston had Bill Penn's back against the wall today, and the Phillies showed they knew it by putting more

"pep" in their practice than they had heretofore exhibited. They practically put all their time in batting practice—a thing strongly needed. Rumors were current that Moran was going to shake up his infield and take Niehoff out of it; but they were traceable to no source. Niehoff hasn't made a hit during the entire series, but his work around second base has been A-1. Moran has not made a change in his line-up or used a pinch hitter since the series started.

Mayer and McQuillan served up the slants for the Philly batters to slant. Boston again was on the field a good two hours before game time, working every minute. Ray Collins, Gregg and Mays worked for Carrigan's slingers. At 1:45, Shore and Chalmers began warming up while other pitchers retired to the dugouts. After Moran had watched Chalmers critically for a few moments, he noticed Rixey, his tall left hander, from the cave and the two took the kinks of their arms side by side.

The line-up: Philadelphia: Stock, 3b.; Baneroff, ss.; Fasket, cf.; Cravath, rf.; Lullern, 1b.; Niehoff, 2b.

Boston: Hooper, rf.; Scott, ss.; Speaker, cf.; Rohlfetz, 1b.; Lewis, lf.; Gardner, 3b.; Barry, 2b.

Batteries: Philadelphia, Chalmers and Burns; Boston, Shore and Cady.

Moran stood at Rixey's shoulder as he worked and the big pitcher opened up a burst of speed that looked good. Shore was the only pincer who warmed up for Boston.

Umpires: Evans behind the lot, Rigler on bases, O'Loughlin and Klem on foul lines.

Ten minutes before game time it appeared certain that the crowd would exceed that of yesterday. The bleachers were packed and the grandstand was practically full, while thousands were still scripping about the streets surrounding the big field. Hundreds were standing in the center field. On the far bank of the Charles river many could be seen congregated for a view of the crowd if nothing else. The baselines were dry and fast.

Five minutes before game time Chalmers was the only Philly pitcher warming up.

THE PILGRIMS CLUB MEET A SUCCESS

Superintendent Hale of the State Training School Makes An Interesting Address

The first meeting of the Pilgrim's club of the Congregational church held in the church parlors last evening, was a success not only in the large attendance, but in the general interest of the evening and the address by Will S. Hale, superintendent of the Oregon state training school.

In all his talks in public, Mr. Hale wishes to impress his hearers that he is not running a reform school, nor is the training school the home of a lot of bad boys. Possibly ten per cent of the boys are really bad. In order to separate those from the boys who just happened to be found in bad company, Mr. Hale asked the legislature to give him a separate building for them, but the legislature did not see it that way. Here are a few things about the school not generally known:

There are no armed guards or prison walls.

75 per cent of the new boys smoke cigarettes.

No tobacco of any kind is allowed in the school, and no boy is subject to parole if found using tobacco of any kind.

A large per cent of the stealing done by boys is to raise money to buy cigarettes.

Two-thirds of the boys get in trouble through selling junk.

The accommodations of the present building are no better than 25 years ago. The late legislature would not appropriate money for any improvements. Less than ten per cent of the boys give the superintendent any trouble.

One half of the time is spent by the boys in shop or our door work and the other half in studies. They progress as rapidly as pupils in the public schools who spend much more time on their books.

The training school has a lecture course from the O. A. C., weekly movies and a library.

Fully 95 per cent of the boys are from the cities. Only two country boys are now in the school.

A FRIEND TO THE WORKINGMAN

Five years ago I was so troubled with kidney trouble and inflammation of the bladder that I had to cease work, until I heard of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root through a cured friend of mine. After using five or six bottles I felt fine and have continued to work as I had before my affliction.

Yours very truly,
