The case of Grace Driscoll against Dr. Mark Skiff was called in department number 1 of the circuit court this morning and the jury were favored with some inside information relative to the tooth repairing industry. The nerve racking buzz of the dental drill and the soothing scratch of the sandpaper were reproduced along with the expert testimony relative to the germs which cause pyria. Pyria is a disease of the mouth. The plaintiff testified that she entered a contract with Dr. Skiff whereby she was to have certain dental work done for $94 and that she paid $65 of this sum. She then claimed that she was obliged to go to another dentist to have the work removed because it was unsatisfactory. Dr. Skiff claims that the subsequent trouble was due to a disease called pyria which affected the mouth of the plaintiff. The plaintiff in her complaint asked for special damages in the sum of $145 and $2500 general damages. Grant Corby is appearing for the plaintiff and A. O. Condit and George G. Bingham for the defendant.

The famous chimney case was on in department number 1 of the circuit court this afternoon. The suit was brought by S. A. Hughes against School District No. 24, of Marion county. Mr. Hughes is a contractor who contracted to build two chimneys for the Salem Heights school for $920. Owing to some alterations he was to receive $30 additional and is now suing to collect $950 from the school board. The school board refuses to pay, according to the answer, because there were no certificates of acceptance given by the contractor to show that the work was completed according to the plans. Mr. Hughes replies that the school board discharged the architect and employed a janitor in lieu thereof and that he was unable to secure the certificates for this reason. The chimneys are now smokeless because they are exhibits in the case and the school board claims that they were not built according to the plans and the plaintiff claims that they could not be built of the certain inside dimensions because the bricks called for were too large and the controversy which has been on for the last six months will finally be decided by the jury late this afternoon or tomorrow. W. C. Winslow is representing the plaintiff and George G. Bingham the defendant.

The case of Grace Driscoll against Dr. Mark Skiff was continued today and the plaintiff given up to and including October 16 to file an amended complaint and the defendant up to and including October 20 to plead to the amended complaint. The jury was discharged.
