A Galley o' Fun!

BOARDING-HOUSE CONVERSATION.

"I came across an odd word in the dictionary last night, 'luxurious,' meaning one very fond of his wife," remarked the Ribbon Clerk.

"It's obsolete," commented the Gruff Old Bachelor.

"If a married man leading a luxurious life will cut out the 'I,' he will get about the same thing; and there will be no reason why he shouldn't become infatuated with his wife," said the Ready Wit.

"That's an abominable pun, and I for one shall seek another home if we are going to have profanity at this table," declared Miss Prim.

"I never have served no profanity," said the Landlady, looking up alarmed. "Don't believe in them fancy dishes. Why, one of them rich docks fired his chef because he couldn't cook ham and eggs."

"That cook must've got a job here," muttered the Graduate Office-Boy, with an insinuating wink.

"Speaking of words," suggested the Ready Wit, to head off the brewing storm, "if 'matricide' is the murder of a mother, is 'matrimony' the murder of love?"

"You ought to be killed for that," said the Ribbon Clerk.

"That was a perfectly beautiful murder in the morning papers, wasn't it?" asked the Blonde Lady, "I read every word."

"Poor dear, you must be tired," said the sympathetic Miss Keyes.

"On the contrary," suggested the Ready Wit, satirically, "I always find the account of a murder very soothing to the nerves."

And even the Landlady laughed.

OREGON EXHIBITS GROW BETTER DAILY

Eastern Oregon Wool and Klamath Movie Pictures Attract Visitors

Oregon Building, P. P. I. E., Oct. 16.—Three new exhibits in the Oregon building are attracting considerable attention. There are an exhibit of Eastern Oregon wool, 1000 feet of movie film showing the wonders of the Klamath country, and a "stereomograph" presenting fifty to seventy-five views of the Astoria region. The wool exhibit is from Unatilla's fine sheep, there being ten fleeces ranging in weight from five to eleven pounds, contributed by L. McDonald, J. E. Smith Livestock Company, C. M. Mathews, Kenneth J. Warner, E. Pedra, O. Jones, Donald Ross, and the Unatilla company. The Pendleton Woolen Mills, which has a large booth in the building showing rugs, blankets, etc., is making this display also, and added interest comes in the fact that wool from the state it was in when taken from the sheep's back to the finished woolen product is shown. Four foot spools of yarn, with smaller spools of different grades, together with samples of the different clothes produced, the various showings bearing blue ribbons and the names of those who have contributed to the exhibit, make it one about which very many people linger.

The "stereomograph" is an automatic presenter of colored views. The fishing industry of the lower Columbia is presented in a series of views that make clear the magnitude of the canning plants, and the scale on which the industry is carried on. Cattle, forest, dairy, and pastoral scenes in the Astoria region are shown, and most of them are unusually good. The hay crops, hog culture, the Columbia River Highway, the vessels in the harbor, and other fine views proclaim the glory of the northwestern part of the state, about which there has been much inquiry.

The Klamath county film is a thing of beauty and not second to any being shown in the building's theatre. The scenic glory of the Klamath county is almost beyond comparison, and the industrial and farming opportunity very great, if the film may be accepted at its face value, as it necessarily must be. No one can have a doubt that Klamath has a wealth of timber and some big mills, neither can they doubt that Klamath grows things, and that there is much territory there needing settlers. It is a great film.

New Agricultural Displays. Columbia county's display, largely from the school fair there, is now in place occupying one section of the booth that is set between the Willamette Valley display and that other attractive one from Coos and Curry. While not so extensive the Columbia showing of apples, pears, potatoes, squash, onions, beets, corn, tomatoes, etc., places that section on the map and fills a part in making the Oregon effort the best possible. The products sent down measure up acceptably with other offerings of like kind.

One section of the Willamette Valley space has been built over completely and now shows immense squash and pumpkin, potatoes as beautiful as any, good looking corn, and a varied lot of farm products, most of this having come from the Lane county fair. This is displayed in a big corner, in an excellent light, and brings many inquiries.

O. E. Freytag, director of Agricultural exhibits, who returned a few days ago from the state fair at Salem, is now engaged in placing the products he secured while on his visit in the north. Some superior fruits and vegetables, as well as grains and grasses will soon be up for inspection. Most of this will be shown in the Palace of Agriculture.

Fifteen boxes of first-class apples have just arrived from Roseburg, and something near a ton of other products from Douglas county are somewhere between here and there. This display will be placed in the Southern Oregon booth, which is already a most attractive and thoroughly artistic.

Good Results Certain. The crowds at the Exposition continue to average 60,000 daily and the number here from distant points, the far east and middle west, appears to be on the increase. The inquiries are many and specific, and the prospect of interesting people in Oregon seems very great. Very naturally, much inquiry is about "cheap" lands, and there are many who want to know about homesteads, but the majority are interested in possibility of production and climatic conditions rather than something "cheap." In fact, prices quoted $50 to $150 for land easily accessible to railroad or community is surprising to most of the inquirers, many of whom are from sections where land is quoted at double and treble that figure. The different representatives here say that there are many inquiries about small acreages near the large communities, and all agree that there is constant questioning about Eastern Oregon. Some tremendously effective advertising must have been done for that section of the state within the past two or three years, for very many from distant points seem to have some familiarity with the region, and want to know more about its opportunities. The inquirers generally seem to be favorably impressed with Oregon's showing here, and many who had not thought of going into the state at this time say at this time and come back prepared to remain if they can find the specific things for which they are looking.

Commissioner's Booth Here. R. A. Booth, of Eugene, is now resident commissioner at the Oregon building and is into the game with fine spirit. He had not been down since a trip shortly after the opening of the Exposition and now finds changes in the Oregon building and the exhibits generally that are very pleasing to him. In the early exposition season the ex-libits were fewer and smaller, and as a matter of course there was not the spick-and-span and thoroughly finished appearance that marks the building today. Mr. Booth finds nothing to criticize, but is fertile in suggestion, and thoroughly active in all that goes to make for the greater success of the effort here. He and Mrs. Booth with Hostess Gray and Manager Hyland, are upholding the social end of Oregon affairs, and finding pleasure in everything but the earthquake thrills. The booths expect to remain until the end of the month, or near that, and their host of Oregon friends will find them there those few times when the commissioner feels that he must tear himself away if the Fair is to be seen. Oregonians would probably be amazed to know just how seriously the officials have taken their job here and how closely they stay with the situation while they are here.

About People. Among the recent visitors seen at the building were Sam Jackson, owner of the Portland Journal, Carl Abrams of the Salem Statesman, Editor Greer of the Ashland Tidings, Dr. W. J. Kerr, president of O. A. C., Frank J. Miller, state insurance commissioner, with Mrs. Miller, Sam Evans of the Klamath Falls Northwestern, C. H. Vauspel of Ashland, Dr. J. R. N. Bell, of Corvallis, will be here within a day or so to represent Benton county in affairs connected with the Willamette Valley booth. He will have a minister partner in the person of Dr. Dunsmore, of Independence, who has represented Polk county here since the opening of the Exposition.

More For Indians But Less For Irrigation

Washington, Oct. 15.—The United States government will spend more money on its Indian wards and less on irrigation next year than heretofore, Secretary of the Interior Lane stated today after a conference with President Wilson. His estimates for appropriations show a decrease of about $1,000,000 from last year's and will total about $219,600,000.

Nine million dollars will be expended on the government railway in Alaska, another nine on irrigation projects, a decrease of $3,000,000 from last year; and $75,000 for the Flathead reservation in Montana.

Larger appropriations for the bureau of education and of mines will be sought and much more will be asked than previously.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 15.—In conformity with a custom long ago abandoned but resurrected and put into force by the freshmen themselves this year, the class of 1915 at the University of Washington last night burned their street caps in a huge bonfire on Denney field and doused the small green caps with the pearl button on it as they serpenanted around the flames yelling like Indians. The "Sing Sing" quartet added to the din—or harmony.

INDIANS WELL COACHED.

He is not skilled in gentle art To please his lad fair; He does not strive to win her heart With flowers sweet and rare.

No sonnets ripple from his pen; No moonlight serenades Awakes from dreams—of other men, The shy—and sleepy—maid.

No frenzied vows he'll register, Nor is his love revealed By derring-do for sake of her On any jousting field.

When he a-wooling goes, instead Of stunts like that, he'll say: "Let's double up, kid—on the dead. I got a raise today!"

CONTRITION. "It is not so much that I fooled as that, in my rage, I struck the caddy with my brassie!" said the golf person.

Her entourage besought her never mind, as to soothe her. "Never mind!" the lovely girl exclaimed. "You seem not to realize that the best usage called for the mangle!"

AN OPINION. The Peacock—it is true that a great deal of money is contributed for missionary work, but if people would give what they can afford, the amount would be increased tenfold.

Friend—R'm! The missionaries would be able to provide their own gunboats.

GOOD SOCIETY. "Bunny is quite well, isn't he?" "Oh, yes! He boasts that he's been hunted by some of our best people."
