FOOD FOR FILM FANS COOKED UP TO ORDER

Some Comment On Local Moving Picture Matters By the Staff "Bug"

A fellow must needs step lively these days to keep up with the m. p. game in this most beautiful of western cities. Five-count 'em—palaces of flicker stuff.

Prices locally seem to be struggling upward. But what shall it profit a manager if he add a jitney to his admission price and two jitneys to his cost of operation?

One thing that can't happen to a m. p. fancier in Salem at present: He can't get lonesome. But he can get broke.

What does it portend when the picture house managers manifest a tendency to indulge in heart-to-heart talks with the public? We don't exactly know, but we suspect something.

As time glides along more and more Salem people are becoming affiliated with the h. o. t. B. O. T. stands for box office twist, a malady of the elbow caused by the exercise of sliding coins across to the how-many girls, and it isn't serious.

Is it a fact—or isn't it?—that the m. p. public is becoming a bit fussy? It seems to want pictures of a higher grade than it was satisfied with a while back, and it seems to care less for quantity and more for quality. The house showing the most reels caught a lot of us once. But not any more, dear Agnes. Too many reels maketh the heart sick, as the poet said.

Once not such a very long time ago this town was Chaplin mad. Fact is Charley is so d— funny that a week or so of him tires us all out.

Pretty soon now—it won't be long—Charley will be in the discard along with old Bill Shakespeare. And that's a pair to draw!

Edgar Allen Poe's "Raven" is announced for the flickers. Cheer up! The worst is yet to come!

For our part we're going to cease believing everything a house press agent tells us about a picture. We've been fooled about enough with excessively speedy stuff. It may cost a lot of money all right, but sometimes it is neither wholesome nor palatable. Safe and sane—no more intellectual stomachaches—that's the slogan for us henceforth.

And now everybody, almost, is running to vaudeville. The picture programs are being augmented with "acts." The Sullivan & Considine people put a bill in here once a week, and every theatre in town with one exception becomes a temple of vodeville. (The said exception was a t. of v. once, but reformed.) Whether or not the stuff of real merit gets what it deserves is a matter for the public to determine. Any one manager, no matter what he may try to do in the way of furnishing good entertainment, is as helpless as a leaf of a wind.

We infer from an item in John W. Kelly's interesting column in the Portland Telegram that Bud Fisher of "Mutt and Jeff" fame, is not so particular as to how he gets his material as he should be. There are many people who seem to see nothing wrong in stealing any successful idea that may come to their attention.

Every well regulated Sunday paper now has a department in which girls are informed how to achieve fame and fortune as moving picture actresses. Interesting enough—but shucks!

A writer in a Portland paper says that theatre managers are what school children call "copy cats." We believe he's more than half right.

After all, with all the flaunting of banners and the spreading of paper, really good moving pictures are not numerous. We mean pictures to which a man can take his family on an evening and feel afterward that his money was well spent. There are a few of this sort coming all the time. Salem folks probably know where to see them as well as we do.

It is a fair supposition that no theatrical music is perfect. The manager who makes a practice of calling attention to the excellence of his music at the same time draws notice to its imperfections, which imperfections the average auditor would likely not have noticed otherwise.

It is nearly as ill advised to recommend a photo play to a friend as to recommend a book. Just as likely as not he won't be pleased with it, and his confidence in your judgment is jolted. The advertisements of course are all made up along the same line; every picture is superlative; and the public comes naturally to pay no attention. When it sees a title it thinks it will like it, takes a chance, that's all, excepting in the case of a very limited number of plays featuring certain players, whom we might name were we so disposed. These are always good, sometimes better than at others, but never failing to come up to the worth while standard.

STREET LINE TO STAY

Dallas, Ore., Oct. 30.—Circuit Judge Belt today stopped the city of Independence from changing contested street lines in accordance with a survey made by County Surveyor Canfield, which would force adjoining property owners to move back several feet from the present lines. The court held that the city's long acceptance of the lines has enjoined it from making the change. The action was taken on a suit for injunction by J. Hart, of Independence, against the city.
 The contested street was formerly a county road leading from the bridge at Independence, through North Independence and joining with the Salem road. The proposed change in the lines was bitterly threshed out in the council before the case was taken to the courts.
 Evidence was brought out at the trial that the street had been established for many years, that the lines had been accepted and that property owners had built fences and buildings on the basis of the present lines. The case lasted two days, and many witnesses were called. Judge Belt inspected the street before he decided the case.
 Several Independence councilmen have declared that the case will be taken on appeal to the supreme court.

Seattle Fears More Incendiary Fires

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 30.—An increase in the number of patrolmen along the waterfront is being urged today by dock owners, shipping men and Port Warden Payvase as a means of preventing a repetition of the million dollar fire which Thursday night destroyed Pier 14. There is now practically no doubt that the fire was of incendiary origin.

A whole army of policemen on the water front would not prevent fires from doing their work, is the opinion of Fire Marshal Harry Brighurst and Mayor Gill.
