LONDON THE DARKEST CITY IN THE WORLD

Is Black As When "the Light of Other Days" the Candle Was In Use

By WILBUR S. FORREST (United Press Staff Correspondent) London, Oct. 30. (By mail)—London, the darkest city in the world! Such is the ancient town's new title, Zeppelin raids have made it the world's city of darkness.

Imagine, if possible, London one hundred years ago, before Benjamin Franklin started to experiment with a key on a kite string; before Edison began to see the possibilities of small wires in a vacuum glass globe; before great power plants were built.

Imagine, Broadway without a gleam of light; State street, Chicago, without an electric sign; Market street, San Francisco, without its "White Way" and, even then, it would be hard to imagine how dark the Zeppelins have made London.

The great Strand, whose hotels and electric signs once sent light far into the upper void, is as black as the Arc of Spades. Piccadilly, Regent street, Westminster and all the rest are equally black.

London fog and the approaching "black fogs" of winter and London will be found as dark as an American cross roads village at midnight.

Even the silent Thames, which the Germans claimed guided them to London on the last memorable raid, is doomed to blackness. Lights that for generations have reflected their yellowness on the swift waters have ceased to shine.

Moonlight alone can make the Thames reflect itself visibly at great altitudes and Zeppelins are not moonlight birds. Darkest nights are Zeppelin nights and in them London needs must resemble the bleak nothingness of open country.

Residential districts, suburbs and all must curtain their windows and shade their lights. Police constantly watch for unshaded windows and, if a violation is found, a sharp warning is administered.

From Piccadilly Circus, where the figure of Mercury on the fountain, can now, after dark, be seen only fifty feet away, to Bond street, noted the world over for fashionable shops, night is supreme.

On the streets motor omnibuses, taxicabs and vehicles of all varieties limit speed and activity after nightfall. The "buses" crawl through the haze with darkened interiors and showing faint blue and red lights fore and aft.

Kellaher Can Keep Place Open On Sunday

Portland, Or., Oct. 29.—A temporary injunction restraining District Attorney Evans from issuing complaints against tradespeople keeping their places of business open on Sunday was issued by Circuit Judge Gatens today.

HE APPRECIATES HIMSELF.

Richard B. Case, a last year's graduate in general agriculture, is helping his father on a ranch which he has recently purchased near Vancouver, Washington.

Mr. Case writes that he has not only an opportunity to practice what he has learned here, but also has a fine home and in a short time they expect to have a model farm. He firmly believes that every community should have a college man in it to put the modern methods of farming into practice and instruct farmers by observation.—Corvallis Gazette-Times.

FIANCIAL AND TRADE CONDITIONS DISCUSSED

New York, Oct. 23.—Extraordinary events are taking place almost daily which attract comparatively little attention. Evidently we are rapidly becoming accustomed to the abnormal and longer shivers at every new disturbance or novel movement.

Home business conditions are growing more and more satisfactory. Under the stimulus of cheap money, good crops and war contracts there has been a very decided revival of commercial activities that has probably not yet reached its maximum.

Foreign trade is still one of the most important factors in our commercial and financial activities. Our imports continue relatively light for the obvious reason that Europe's energies are devoted to producing commodities other than the luxuries which we are accustomed to buy abroad.

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Had blood,—that is, blood that is impure or impoverished, thin and pale,—is responsible for more ailments than anything else.

It affects every organ and function. In some cases it causes catarrh; in others, dyspepsia; in others, rheumatism; and in still others, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles.

It is responsible for run-down conditions, and is the most common cause of disease.

Had's Sarsaparilla is the greatest purifier and enricher of the blood the world has ever known. It has been wonderfully successful in removing serofula and other humors, increasing the red-blood corpuscles, and building up the whole system. Get it today.
