At the meeting held last evening of the Pilgrims' club at the First Congregational church, addressed by Judge J. C. Morland, he was asked whether Oregon was settled mostly by families from the south or north. His answer was that while George Himes, known as the historian of Oregon had expressed the opinion that northern families were in the majority, his opinion was that the southern families came here in greater numbers. Many southerners had moved to Illinois and other northern states, and had again moved to the state. This accounted for Oregon being a Democratic state in the early days when political battles were fought out on the slavery question.

PARLIAMENT ASKED FOR 2 BILLION MORE

This Amount Will Make A Total of Seven Billion War Expenditures

London, Nov. 10.—Dealing in dizzy totals, Premier Asquith today asked parliament for $2,000,000,000 additional credit for carrying an England's share in the war—a share, he admitted, whose cost is constantly continuing upward. In seeking this vast new sum, bringing the total to $7,000,000,000, Asquith announced that from a total of $2,715,000,000 expended from April to November 6, $2,585,000,000 had been used in buying shells, guns and other munitions with which to blow the enemy to bits. Loans to aid her allies have also continued, and of the above total, from April, $491,000,000 was used for this purpose. The balance was spent in miscellaneous ways. While picturing a continuing increase in England's daily war burden, the premier assured the house of commons that the government is doing its utmost in the way of economies. He mentioned that creation of a joint England-French war council is expected while it is hoped Russia and Italy will also be represented. Asquith estimated that to September 12 the war had cost $12,750,000 daily.

Senator John Kern and Leader Kitchin Will Be Side-Track

Washington, Nov. 10.—Senator John Kern, upper house leader, and Representative Claude Kitchin, lower house leader, will be "ditched" by the administration in the matter of directing the military preparedness program, according to plans learned today. Secretary of War Garrison has arranged to have Chairman Hay of the house military committee take charge of the army bill, while Chairman Padgett of the house naval committee will be in charge of the navy budget. In the senate, Senator Swanson of Virginia will handle the navy measure because of the physical infirmities of Senator Tillman, navy committee chairman, while Senator Kern will yield to Chairman Chamberlain, of the military committee, because the army bill is in the latter's field. Moreover, Kern is regarded as lukewarm toward the program. It is planned to introduce the measures in both houses simultaneously. Clark With Wilson. Washington, Nov. 10.—That Speaker Champ Clark will support the administration's preparedness program was indicated by a message he sent to the White House today congratulating the president on his Manhattan club speech. Clemency toward President Ryan of the structural iron workers union and 13 dynamites in Leavey-ward penitentiary. They have served about one-third of their sentences. The group, however, did not mention the McNamara's, similarly held.

Business Men's League Discusses Many Questions Hogs, sociability and Salem bread, besides several other interesting topics, were thoroughly discussed last evening at the meeting of the Business Men's League of the commercial club. President H. W. Meyers turned the meeting over to Hal D. Patton as presiding officer, who proceeded at once to inject all sorts of college 'pep' into the boys, and from the start, things hummed along at a lively rate. Just to discover how they looked from a farmer's standpoint, P. E. Waid, who has been through the farming game, told the members a few things. 'There is no sociability in Oregon,' declared Mr. Waid. 'You must get out among the farmers. A satisfied farmer will bring in more farmers than all your fancy advertising. Every day wagon loads of produce are hauled in to town and then back, as there is not market. You ought to have a packing plant. A farmer can't sell all his hogs in the local market.' As to 'Try Salem First' Mr. Waid noted that our grocery store handled 600 loaves daily of Portland bread. He could not see why we were so loud in talking about trying Salem first, and yet send away for most of our bread. The automobiles were so thick in front of the stores, that he could hardly get near one, and when a farmer came to town with his horses and wagon, there was no suitable place to hitch. Standardizing of merchandise and a produce clearing house were suggested as one of the remedies. Theodore Roth realized that the automobile question was a serious one and a nuisance, but did not know exactly what was to be done about it. As to having bread made in Portland or elsewhere, he felt that he was obliged to have what the women called for, and as long as they insisted on a certain brand, he had to sell it. Standardization of produce was favored by Mr. Roth. As for the hog market, Salem could not handle all the hogs brought to market. To give the farmers an outlet for all their produce, there should be some system of shipping produce. Mr. Miller, another guest, said the only reason he bought of the Japs and Chinks, was because they were Johnny on the spot and could be depended on. As to the bread proposition, C. M. Eppley thought the local bakers were to blame for present condition. 'Instead of trying to make the best quality, they are making cheaper bread, and now trying to sell three loaves for ten cents. People want quality and not cheapness.' C. S. Hamilton started something when he called the attention of Fred Stenloff to the fact that he had seen farmers bring hogs to Salem and failed to sell them. 'Were they red hogs with a ham like a cat, or black ones, with the big hams,' asked Mr. Stenloff. And following up on the hog color, Mr. Stenloff spoke a few well chosen words about hogs. 'Red hogs are the worst kind, and no hog for a farmer to raise. They are coarse and thick skinned and your wife will kick on the thick skin of the bacon from a red hog.' Continuing, Mr. Stenloff said there was a demand for 200 pound hogs, of a cross between Berkshire and Poland China. George Weeber said it did not make any difference as to the color of a hog. The question as to whether premiums offered by merchants were a good thing was frankly discussed and it was the opinion that they were a general nuisance. Z. J. Riggs, of the Capital Drug store qualified as an expert, giving his testimony against pony contests. Walter Denton said he did not believe in any J. Rufus Wallingford schemes in the way of newspaper prizes for subscriptions, pony contests or trading stamps. He suggested that a committee be appointed to go out among the farmers, instead of bringing them in to town to give them a dinner. 'Why not go out to the school house meetings and be sociable, but not ask them for anything or tell them where and how they should spend their money.' As to the fight between the Oregon Retail Merchants association and another Portland association, the sense of the meeting was that the Salem business men should attend the next state meeting in Astoria and take a hand in settling this dispute, for the general good of all.
