BUTTER MARKET STRONG

Portland, Or., Jan. 5.—The butter market has turned repl strong, and in some quarters there is more or less talk of a probable advance in quotations soon, although this view is not generally entertained by creamery interests.

With San Francisco and other leading California markets around 29c for prints, which is within a mere fraction of the local price, there is really no incentive for the trade here to speculate in the southern product.

The only thing that would force California butter in this direction at the moment is the inability of the local trade to secure its requirements of the home product. At the moment some of the leading butter interests here report their inability to secure enough butterfat to take care of their butter requirements, but this condition is by no means general, and a real shortage is not shown.

On the other hand this is the time of the season when California butter prices usually show liberal declines. For that reason the northwest trade is inclined to get rather slow in its price making; keeping at the same time one eye open to watch the California situation.

A potato and onion famine is threatened in Portland and other Pacific

OPEN FORUM

MARKET BOOSTER, NOT CROP BOOSTER, NEEDED

Editor Capital Journal: To those who believe in fair play and progressive attitude of Judge Bushy at the taxpayers meeting Friday is good. Not often do we see a public official with the stamina and courage to stand off an organized attempt to secure a juicy plum.

Judge Bushy shows keen discernment in perceiving that Marion county does not need the stimulus to overproduction for which Mr. Chapin would be employed. Why are certain influential city dwellers so much interested in encouraging larger crops on farms? Have not the returns to producers for the current year been uncertain and usually unprofitable? Though crops were bountiful prices to growers on nearly all variety of produce, were lower than ever. Why? Because production is already greater than consumption. It will never return to the farmer because the commission forms, the wholesaler and retailer must have their profits. It must be remembered that despite large crops, the consumer paid as much as usual if not more for produce from the dealer.

Now the writer has nothing against the merchants, but it must be said that the present system of distribution is too complicated and expensive.

The public market in Salem was opened only when conditions demanded it. But what an infantile attempt! As it is today it is a joke from the viewpoint of practical business methods. The organized merchants must have permitted it to start because they could see it could not last under inexperienced conduct and unpleasant conditions. To make certain of its failure, moreover, the market was given an unsuitable location.

The result of these handicaps is that Salem will soon have a public market no more unless something practical is done and that soon.

What is needed is not a crop increase expert, but a man is badly needed to devote his time and efforts toward improving market conditions.

The producers and consumers of Marion county would, without doubt, be in favor of the office of county agriculturist if its efforts were directed to improve and perfect market conditions.

LA GRANDE RETAINS MANAGER

La Grande, Ore., Jan. 5.—At the annual meeting of the city commission of the city of La Grande, provided for by the commission-managerial charter, held last evening, Commissioner J. A. Russell retired and Commissioner J. D. McKennon qualified and took his place as one of the three commissioners. General Manager F. J. Lafky was unanimously re-elected for the year 1916, which will be his third, at a salary of $2,400. Commissioner McKennon voted for Lafky at that salary, but did so, he said, because he could not get the other members to agree to one or two men who could be secured for $1,800 a year.
