Rev. Robert S. Gail Indorses the Play

Realizing that Salem is having an excellent opportunity tonight when William Owen and company, some of the most famous of modern players, present "The Servant in the House" under the auspices of the local high school student body. Rev. Robert S. Gail, of St. Paul's church, has submitted the following article as his opinion of the production:

Charles Rann Kennedy's "Servant in the House" is one of a small group of the dramatic productions of recent years that may be said to be of permanent value. In the comparatively few years since its appearance it has won its place as a classic of the English language. The influence brought to bear by Mason, the "servant in the house" of the play, is faintly suggestive of the mystery plays; and indeed the text is tinged all along with allegory, so that sometimes it is difficult to see where literal fact leaves off and allegory begins. There is also strong suggestion that Mason is the reincarnation of Jesus of Nazareth, the suggestion being given first by the name (Mason—Son of Man) and more directly by the opening lines of the first act. Even though one may not agree with Mr. Kennedy's implication that the only "man's job" is a dirty job, and that society's disreputables are invariably the sole possessors of virtue, it is a stimulating play, and should by all means be seen by the thoughtful theatre-goer.

SALEM LETTERS HAVE "THEIR PICTURES TOOK"

High School Pupils, Cherrians and Common Folks All Go On the Film

Fully 600 students of the high school and a fair representation of the Cherrians appeared on the scene this morning at 11 o'clock with hundreds of Salem citizens, all willing and anxious to appear in the moving picture scene, of taking the Oregon boosting letters from the office of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company's office and carrying them to the postoffice.

Despite the unfavorable weather, they were not disappointed, as the Pathé moving picture man was on hand and industriously turned the movie camera crank as the pupils dropped in their letters.

Another view was taken near High street as the procession led by the Cherrians and Cherrians marched towards the postoffice.

Many Cherrians as well as high school students may now truthfully say that they have appeared in the movies. The scenes taken today will be shown next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Although there were signs of rain, the pictures were all taken with umbrellas down. The scenes will show the thousands of letters mailed at the office of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company's office, as the students and Cherrians were pressed into service, carrying the baskets filled with letters.

Although today's scene was the climax of letter writing week, yet the management of the Commercial club urges that the good work go on, and that if any eastern friends have been overlooked, there is another day this week and several in the weeks to come, when a letter may be the means of bringing eastern folks to the Willamette valley.

Baptist Minister Dies Worth Nearly Million

Portland, Or., Jan. 21.—Knut Nelson, a retired Baptist preacher said to be worth nearly $1,000,000 was found dead in his bed at the Portland Commons this morning. So humble was he in appearance and habits that none suspected his wealth until an examination of his effects at the morgue at noon today disclosed deeds to Vancouver, B. C., property, and great quantities of mining stocks, some of which are valuable.

Nelson came to Portland recently from Vancouver and had engaged in work at the Portland Commons. Little is known of him here. Letters among his effects spoke of numerous relatives in Minnesota and at Norman, Wash.
