Heavy Rains In Orange Section Start New Flood

The last storm, went to pieces again this morning. Towns along the Southern Pacific coast line were isolated, and service to San Bernardino and other valley cities ceased. The Santa Fe to San Diego, almost ready for resumption of regular schedules, was broken once more.

Telegraph and telephone lines suffered. All wires to San Diego went down when the mission river overflowed its banks and toppled the temporary poles there. San Diego is as badly isolated as it was during the progress of last week's storm.

Lowlands between Los Angeles and the beaches were inundated. Water is around the porch steps of cottages in some parts of Compton. This is higher than any floods rose during the last disturbance. Santa Monica reported unusually high tides, with a gale backing up water in the Venice canals.

Los Cerritos slough between Los Angeles and Long Beach is rapidly filling, and the Pacific Electric bridge is endangered. The Santa Ana river is as high as ever and growing, demolishing temporary bridges.

Long Beach Flooded. Long Beach, Cal., Jan. 27.—Long Beach is again battling with high water as a result of another down-pour during the night amounting to 2.50 inches. Four feet of water is reported in the National Bank of Long Beach building basement and all down town streets are running streams. The fire department was kept busy during the early morning hours responding to flood calls.

The boulevard at Willowville was under a foot and a half of water for the first time this season. Transportation lines are reported still in operation. Advances from the ranchers north of town indicate that the San Gabriel and Los Angeles rivers are not giving trouble as yet, but may be expected to carry a tremendous volume of water when the flood run-off from the foothills reaches here later in the day.

At 9 o'clock this morning, ending a fifteen hour period, three and thirty-three hundredths inches of rain had fallen here. This is a record. Rain continues to fall steadily and grave fears of resulting flood losses are felt.

Snow at Sacramento. Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 27.—The Sacramento valley contributed snow to the several kinds of weather in California today.

All over the Sacramento valley snow came down for several hours in neat "back east" style. It was the second snowstorm of the year in Sacramento, the new year being ushered in with three inches of snow.

About two inches fell Tuesday morning but it rapidly melted and only left an inch stayed on the ground for any length of time.

In the Sierra Nevada mountains there was a heavy snowfall. At the summit of the mountains the snow now measures nearly sixteen feet.

Washouts Stop Trains. Riverside, Cal., Jan. 27.—All trains are annulled on the Santa Fe and Salt Lake roads between this city and Los Angeles because of the damage done by last night's storm. The Santa Fe has a washout at Prado, near Corona, which stopped traffic on the Fullerton branch. The Salt Lake has a washout at Collins, near Ontario and is out of commission. The Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric report their lines in operation. The rainfall for the storm up to 10 o'clock this morning was .98. The season's rainfall is 11.9.

TO BUILD DIWN COAST Eugene, Or., Jan. 27.—Construction men were jubilant today over the announcement of H. P. Hoey that 260 miles of railroad will be constructed between Coos Bay and Eureka, California, connecting the Willamette Pacific, now nearing completion, and the Western Pacific, which has Eureka as its northern terminus.

To date the Willamette Pacific railroad, from Eugene to Coos Bay, has cost $9,000,000, Hoey said.

A road from Coos Bay to Eureka together with the proposed line from Mapleton to Tillamook, would provide a coast route between Portland and San Francisco.

CURLING IRON KILLS HAIR;
NEW METHOD IMPROVES IT

Many a woman loses the silky, fluffy and brilliant appearance of her hair through habitual use of the hot curling iron. Certainly it can do her hair no good to dry up its natural oil, since the life out of it, making it harsh, brittle and dull. And there's no excuse for continuing the use of that destructive instrument, now that we know what can be accomplished by applying plain liquid simerline.

The use of this harmless product really preserves the life, lustre and wavy effect of the hair, and the curly and heavy effect is perfectly natural looking and moist and captivating. If you've never tried it, by all means procure a few ounces from your druggist and use enough to moisten your hair from root to tip, putting it on with a clean tooth brush. The liquid simerline is neither gummy nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use.

THIS IS "HATTERS DAY"

This is "Hatters day." That does not convey any meaning to you unless you are familiar with the history of Union Labor. In the earlier years after the Sherman law was in force, the corporations in several cases, notably the contempt cases against Gompers and other labor leaders, held that labor was a commodity and an article of commerce. The United States Supreme Court sustained this contention. Thus the Sherman law intended for the protection of citizens was made a weapon against them.

The so-called "Anti-Boycott Association" brought suit against the Hatters of Danbury under the Sherman act. The Hatters fought the case and it was in the courts eleven years but was finally decided against them. The award of damages was three fold and the total amount was over $300,000.

This fight by the Hatters led to the adoption of the Clayton Anti-Trust act, which declares that "The labor power of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce."

This judgment against the Danbury Hatters they are unable to pay, and today organized labor all over the United States is donating the pay for one hour's work to help pay it off.

A TYRANNICAL RAILROAD.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 2.—Clerks and freight handlers of the Big Four system went on a strike today to gain their demand for the right to organize.

Organizers said that the trouble would probably spread over the entire system, affecting 3,500 men but not injuring the passenger service.

Officials said they would crush the union, and the walkout followed discharges of clerks for joining the organization.

SCHOONER REPEAT IS DRIFTING ON BEACH

Scudded Before 90 Mile Gale But Is Finally Battered Until Helpless

Portland, Or., Jan. 27.—The sailing schooner Repeat, abandoned by her captain and crew of seven men, is today wallowing helplessly in the sea off Cape Lookout. The French bark Bayard, thought to have met a similar fate to San Francisco, with her top galley masts by the board. Not until the steamer Avalon arrived at South Bend, Washington last night with the Repeat's crew was it learned that it was not the Bayard which has been abandoned near Tillamook.

The Repeat left Port Ludlow, Washington, January 18 for San Francisco with 500,000 feet of mixed lumber. Captain Mackenzie tells a harrowing tale of the adventures of the little craft in last week's storm. Friday and Saturday the Repeat stranded under bare poles before the 90 mile gale, her master vainly endeavoring to bring her into the course of coastwise steamers.

Not until yesterday when the Avalon was signalled, did the Repeat get assistance. Then she was leaning badly, her rigging was torn to pieces and Captain Mackenzie despaired of keeping her off the beach.

The captain has little hopes that the cargo and personal effects of the crew will be saved. The tug Isanta is believed to be still standing by the wreck.

Body of Eighth Victim of Slide Recovered

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 27.—The eighth victim of the Coconowish slide disaster was J. H. Wilson, of Vancouver, B. C., and his body was found buried in the snow at the scene of the wreck yesterday afternoon.

All victims, it is now believed are accounted for. During the five days search hundreds of tons of snow were shoveled and blasted away in an effort to locate the missing bodies.

Traffic is going steadily over the Great Northern Cascade route. No further slides have been reported during the last three days.

COUNTY ASSESSOR BEN WEST SHOWS A RECORD OF ECONOMY

Business of Office Increases But Running Expenses Show Decrease

While the average citizen is practicing economy and demanding lower taxes he no longer requires the same economy of the public officers and though the business of the county has been greatly increased in some instances a few of the office holders have succeeded in actually reducing their running expenses. One instance is the office of County Assessor Ben F. West who conducted the office of county assessor on such a narrow margin of overhead expenses last year that Assessor Ben Keeney, of Lane county, sent his chief deputy down to Salem to find out how Marion county's assessor could handle more business than there was in Lane county for less money.

In casting over his record as shown by the warrants drawn and charged to his account, Mr. West finds that his record will not only bear close scrutiny but he invites the careful citizen to scrutinize it.

In 1912, the year before Mr. West went into office, the tax roll consisted of 888 pages of 29 lines each. In 1915 the roll contained 952 pages of 30 lines each, the equivalent of 285 pages of 29 lines to the page. By actual count, there were 2,784 more names on the 1915 roll than on the 1912 roll.

In spite of the increase in work indicated by these figures, the cost of operating the office is shown by the official records to have been less in 1915 than in 1912. In 1912, the total cost was $6,150.10. At that time the tax roll was extended by another county office but the legislature changed this so that in 1913 this duty devolved upon the county assessor. This brought the total expense of the assessor's office up to $6,740.44 in 1915. Deducting the amount expended for labor in extending the roll—which was $705—the 1915 expense is brought down to $6,035.44 or $114.66 less than in 1912.

This does not take into account considerable incidental expense connected with the extension of roll amounting probably to not less than $50.00 per year.

Since Mr. West has been in office there has been a constantly diminishing number of complaints to come before the board of equalization, which the assessor feels is a tribute to, and a recognition of, the effort that he has made to exercise strict fairness and impartiality in assessing property. Contributing to this result also, is Mr. West's policy of appointing men as deputy assessors, who are recommended by and satisfactory to the taxpayers in the respective localities. This policy has resulted in the selection, in almost every instance, of responsible, representative men in whom the community has confidence, and explains in large part, the assessor believes, the general satisfaction with his administration. Mr. West is generally busy in the field, personally attending to assessment work from March 1st each year until the tax rolls are ready to write.

Mr. West has been a resident of Marion county for 35 years and always has been closely identified with the republican party.

A Portland man was put in jail and will be examined as to his sanity because he wanted to tell the government how to conduct the postoffice department. Yet nothing has been done about several people who are self-confessed experts on the conduct of our foreign relations.

Files Suit Against County.

Mayor E. C. Kirkpatrick of the city of Dallas through his attorney Walter L. Touse Jr., Tuesday filed a complaint in the circuit court of this county asking for an injunction against the collecting of an alleged illegal assessment of five mills against the property located within the corporate limits of this city. The mayor alleges in his complaint that as the city of Dallas is a separate road district the county court has no right to levy a road tax within the city. The filing of the suit is the outgrowth of much discussion over the matter of the county collecting taxes within the corporate limits of cities for road purposes, where the charter of the city creates out of its corporate limits a separate and entire road district, and excludes the jurisdiction of the county court upon such matters. The case will probably be heard before Judge Belt at an early date.
