

DO YOU SUFFER FROM BACKACHE?

When your kidneys are weak and torpid they do not properly perform their functions; your back aches and you do not feel like doing much of anything. You are likely to be dependent and to borrow trouble, just as if you hadn't enough already. Don't be a victim any longer.

The old reliable medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, gives strength and tone to the kidneys and builds up the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar combination of roots, barks and herbs. No other medicine acts like it, because no other medicine has the same formula or ingredients. Accept substitutes, but insist on having Hood's and get it today.

CARL GABRIELSON IN
"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"

CARL GABRIELSON
Who plays the part of Tracey Tanner in the Fortune Hunter.

No young man in Salem has a wider acquaintance than Carl Gabrielson. He counts his personal friends by the hundreds, and each personal friend swears by him—figuratively speaking, of course. When he entered the Salem High School he was known as a mixer of the first magnitude. He was one of the pioneers who put the S. H. S. on the inter-scholastic map. When he landed on the University of Oregon campus he found that his reputation as a mixer and an organizer had preceded him, and he was widely angling for by all the fraternities at the state college. Beta Theta Pi finally hooked him, and he became an officer in that national organization of good fellows.

Carl's college career is part of the student history of the State University. He became known chiefly as an athlete and a song bird (having been "stunt man" on the Oregon Glee for four years) and during his student days he gained a statewide reputation as an amateur actor.

Since his graduation young Gabrielson has become a full-fledged real estate man, and has pulled off some of the biggest land deals in the Willamette Valley.

And what is this all about? Ah, No! Wrong again, my dear Watson. Carl Gabrielson is not running for office, or anything like that. This is merely a preface to the announcement that he is to play one of the leading character parts in Winchell Smith's world-famous comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," which the Social Service Center of the Salem Commercial Club is to produce here February 3 and 4, with an all-star cast of local talent for the benefit of organized municipal charity.

Carl Gabrielson plays the part of Tracey Tanner, the liverman's son. Everyone who has seen "The Fortune Hunter" will remember Tracey. It is one of the best juvenile comedy roles ever written, and has the unique distinction of containing more laughs than there are lines in the part—and Tracey Tanner is a very long part, at that. You can't help laughing at Tracey Tanner. Mr. Smith, the foremost writer of modern comedy, has seen to it that every speech that Tracey speaks brings forth a roar of laughter, and Mr. Gabrielson knows just how to get all the laughter the part calls for.

The Social Service Center's presentation of "The Fortune Hunter" is going to be a great production of a great play. The members of the local cast include the best known people in Salem, the play will be staged with brand new scenery throughout, and it will be directed by Mr. James Mott, whose production of "Arizona," and "Brown of Harvard" last winter set an entirely new standard for amateur theatricals in Salem.

The forthcoming performances of "The Fortune Hunter" will be the first authorized amateur production of this famous play in the United States; Mr. Smith having given the Salem Social Service Center the exclusive right to present his celebrated comedy for the benefit of the charity work of the center is so successfully carrying on. The prices for "The Fortune Hunter" are 25c, 50c and 75c—no more—and the reserved seat sale will open at the box office of the Grand Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Willamette Prepared to Put Up Good Game

Willamette university basketball fans will pull hard for their team when the varsity lines up against the University of Washington team in Willamette gym tonight. The University of Washington has a string of victories to their credit this season and will endeavor to add another against Willamette. Washington has the better of the argument on comparative scores but the W. U. boys are counting on their home rosters and home ground to overshadow the advantage tonight. Coach Matthews says his squad is in the best shape this season for the game and the boys have been putting in some hard practice for the coming contest during the last week. The defeat by the University of California taught the boys some new tricks which they will probably try out on the visitors tonight. The University of California, by the way, also trimmed the Washington quintet.

DEATH OF MRS. HUFFAKER

Mrs. Sarah Huffaker, of Garden Home, wife of M. E. Huffaker, died January 19. She was a daughter of the late Robert Ady, who was one of the pioneers that stood with P. X. Matthien at Champego on the momentous occasion when the first organized government in the Oregon country was formed.

Mrs. Huffaker was a native Oregonian, having been born at Champego February 22, 1825. She leaves the following children: Mrs. J. A. Hamar, Portland; Mrs. Howard Smith, Salem; D. Huffaker, Banks, and Ralph and Violet Huffaker, Garden Home. She also leaves two sisters, Mrs. A. V. Holston, Portland; Mrs. Josephine McPholand, Newberg, and two brothers at Waterloo.

Her parents and family came to Oregon from Illinois in 1845. The crossed the plains with ox teams and settled at old Champego. In 1880 she was married to M. E. Huffaker and they lived at Champego on a part of the old donation land claim until 1900, when they moved to Garden Home where they have since lived.

Funeral services were held at the family residence at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Interment was at Crescent Grove cemetery.—Woodburn Independent.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY

Hastings, Minn., Jan. 28.—Club women of this little city, proud of being located on the Father of Waters, tired of eating the steam and organized a pure ice plant, after some one wrote a popular ballad, "Frozen Mud for Lemonade." At the end of the first year the women related $109.29 to their customers.

Because she talked too much in municipal court, a Portland woman landed in jail for an hour. But she had her say just the same.

Insane Man Escapes.
A logger from Falls City by the name of Robert Swanson was brought to Dallas, Thursday morning to be examined as to his sanity and while waiting a lunch in a local restaurant escaped his attendants by slipping out the back door of the establishment. Up to the present time he is still at large. The man was injured in the woods about Black Rock last fall by a limb falling and striking him on the head.

Jailed For Stealing Beef.
Herman Hoyt, a tenant on the Harris place west of this city was arrested and placed in the county jail last Tuesday charged with killing a young heifer belonging to H. G. Campbell. The animal was missed from the Campbell herd Monday morning and a search was made and a piece was found where it had been killed and butchered. Hoyt was suspected of the deed and a search warrant was obtained and Sheriff Orr went to the home of Hoyt and searched the premises and had about given up the job when the carcass of the animal was uncovered from under a pile of hay. Wednesday, Hoyt was indicted by the grand jury and the case will come up for hearing before Judge Bell next Monday. This prisoner has a wife and six small children who are in a destitute condition and this fact no doubt was the cause of the crime.

Arson Case Hearing Soon.
The case of Mrs. Amanda Rexford and Dennis McMurray, the two Independence people who were arrested on an arson charge will be heard by Judge H. H. Bell in the circuit court Monday afternoon. The parties recently secured with setting fire to the old hotel building in Independence on November 6th. The fire destroyed the hotel property and several other adjacent buildings. A large number of witnesses from Independence have been subpoenaed.

Smiths Again Indicted.

HOYS TO FILL 100 CARS

Portland, Or., Jan. 29.—What is regarded as one of the biggest contracts for freight traffic closed here for quite a while is the order recently secured by the North Bank Railroad to move approximately 10,000 bales of hops from various points in the Willamette valley to the Atlantic seaboard.

The hops recently were purchased from growers' representatives and warehouse men by Louis Lachmann, of Salem, for London brokers and brewers.

The shipment will require about 100 cars and will be started in Salem and vicinity within the next few days. It is proposed to assemble the cars in Portland as rapidly as possible and start them eastward promptly. It is probable that the movement will be made up in trainload lots when it reaches Spokane.

East of Spokane the business will be divided between the Great Northern and Northern Pacific routes, which will haul it to St. Paul where it will be distributed over various routes.

Thousands Hear Wilson
Talk On Preparedness

blow today in his fight to win the nation to his preparedness program. The reception he got seemed to warm him to his subject; his speech tingled with an appeal to patriotism for backing in his efforts to make America strong in defense.

Six thousand persons crunched into the hall before the president arrived, and the doors were thronged with others eager for admission. At 12:30, upon a half hour before the president reached there, every seat was taken and there was only little standing room.

The crowd sang and the band played; then as the president's party arrived the band burst forth into Lohengrin's Wedding march, while the crowd screamed its approval, and the president and his wife smiled in confusion.

Cheering for five minutes greeted the president's appearance. Mrs. Wilson was escorted by a delegation of women. "As your servant and representative, I should come here and report to you on public affairs," he declared after voting his thanks for the demonstration accorded him and his wife. "It is the duty of every public man to hold frank counsel with the people he represents."

At once he plunged into the problem of national preparedness. "There have been many views expressed on national defense," he said. "Some proceed from sentiment, and I do not feel free to criticize any of these for this is a country of free expression."

"I love peace, but peace costs something, and the best way to maintain it is to gain the respect of other nations."

Must Stand Together.
"I have tried to be neutral, not only in my acts, but in my feeling. It is hard to keep the judgment cool when the world is running red with blood, and it is hard to keep the passion of sympathy under control of the judgment. But it is not wise to be guided by the impulses of passion. And, while we admire the zeal of the professional enthusiast, I would not wish to be guided by him."

Thereupon he reiterated views, expressed in his New York speech Thursday, indicating that the nation must stand with its neighbors to the south against foreign aggressions aimed at this hemisphere. He declared, too, the United States seeks no territorial aggrandizement.

"What is it we have to defend?" he queried. "We want to defend the life of the nation against interference, and defend the unity of the western hemisphere. In defense of these things, our thoughts must go beyond our own border. America stands for sovereignty of free peoples; and she stands as an example of independence. America does not desire anything any other country can give it aside from justice and friendship."

An Army to Insure Peace.
"The thing we are in love with is efficiency, but not merely in business which only underlies the bigger thing—

America's spirit. I have a great enthusiasm for rendering America spiritually efficient and those involved in military endeavor, efficient."

"We want merely an army of sufficient size to preserve peace, and we want to back it with the spirit which shows that the people are back of the army."

"I am not going into the details of the militia program, for details make no difference. I am convinced of one thing, however, not that there should be a great militant force in this country, but instead a great reserve of citizens who will be glad to go to the service of their country. America is nothing if it consists of such as us; it must consist of us all."

Men of Straw Set Up.
"What is really proposed? It is astonishing how many men of straw are set up only to be knocked down, and this nation will not be deceived by threats of danger only imagined. I believe that I am proposing a very business like thing, for along with industrial and vocational education, it is perfectly feasible to instruct young men of this country in the use of arms. It will not then be necessary for men, cradle, green and raw to come to the defense of the country. It would be a shame for this nation to do this when it does not need to wait for training a body of men in the use of arms and in efficiency in an armed camp."

"According to our plans, it will be up to young men and their employers. We will then see what is the true spirit of the country."

The president said he did not fear congressional debate on the preparedness program, and declared himself sure that it would bring out most satisfactory results.

"It is a pity that this is campaign year," he continued. "And I hope that no one will draw this subject into a partisan issue. Democrats do not differ from republicans on the question of national safety. Men on the other side politically are just as enthusiastic for this as I am. I would feel ashamed of any friend of mine who views it differently."

VAMPIRE WALK LEARNED FROM FAMED DANCER

Miss Theda Bara, the Parisian actress, who plays Francesca, the vampire-woman in "The Galley Slave," a William Fox production, admits that one striking feature of her impersonation of Francesca is due to the careful schooling she underwent to adopt a peculiar serpentine walk which she uses with great effect in her playing of the part. Miss Bara is a warm friend of Isadora Duncan, the famous classical dancer, and Miss Duncan instructed her in the lithe, sinuous movements characteristic of the vampire-woman of Poet Emerson Browne's greatest success. "My idea has always been," said Miss Bara, "that the gestures and walk of a person must be influenced by their character. My plan of this woman is she is pantherish in her every pose and action as well as in mind. Under the tuition of my friend Miss Duncan I think I have gained the effect I desired to obtain, that of a woman cruel and calculating, fascinating, victim, as a cat fascinates its prey, by her movements which in a measure reflect her nature."

The large number of candidates who are making early announcements indicates that preparedness in politics often is getting ready for something that is not likely to happen.
