Quantity of Products Not So Much Needed He Tells Marion Farmers

Quality and not quantity is what the farmers of the Willamette valley should strive for, according to Professor G. B. Bouquet of the gardening department of the O. A. C. In his address Saturday afternoon at the commercial club, he told the farmers that their salvation was in producing better vegetables. To illustrate what the farmers are bringing to the Salem market, just before he began his address, he went to a grocery store and bought an assortment of onions, beets and cabbages.

The onions were small and green, the cabbage was medium and unshiny and the beets were of the small variety and they were brought to the Salem market and sold to a grocer. If these were a sample of what the average farmer was raising, Prof. Bouquet thought the said farmers were in need of considerable education.

"We need a better potato seed in this country," said the professor. "Any northern seed is all right. It does not make much difference whether they are Burbanks or Gold Coin, just so they have square ends and are of good size.

"The dealer does not care anything about the name of a potato as all he wants is one of good size and shape," blames the Farmers.

Hector Macpherson, field agent for the O. A. C., told of the troubles of farmers' co-operation societies and traced them all to the fact that farmers would not grade or standardize their products and to the fact that they would not stand together.

"I do not go much on farmers running a co-operative store as not one in 20 will succeed," he said. The failure of co-operative stores he thought was due to the fact that farmers would not stick together and not the well known fact that farmers expected their co-operative store to sell their inferior goods.

Illustrating the point that farmers would not stay with their co-operative stores unless tied up with an iron clad contract, he referred to one of the successful cheese factories at Tillamook. The farmers interested, in order to raise additional money, all went on a joint note, which made them severally liable for the whole amount. When things were going bad at first, many

WILL NOT FIGHT OVER M'CREIDIE'S CHARGES

Limit of Salaries at $4,500 Will Stay—Other News in Sporting Line

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—The well known dove of peace will have full opportunity to flutter over the special meeting of the Pacific Coast league here tomorrow. Henry Berry, owner of the Seals, will not stage a battle with Walter or Judge McCredie here over Walter's charges against Henry, for the simple reason that neither of the McCredies will be here. Oaker Levitt, of Oakland, will hold the Portland proxy.

Neither will there be any scrap over the proposal to raise the salary limit of the league to $5,000 a month. With Portland, Salt Lake and Oakland strongly opposed to such action, Berry declared today he was not in favor of standing pat on the $4,500 limit.

"If three of the six clubs favor standing on the $4,500 limit," he said, "I do not believe in trying to force a higher limit on them."

Berry, owner Powers of Los Angeles, and Levitt will be the only magnates in attendance at tomorrow's meeting. Frank Chance, of the Angels, will be in town with Powers.

A Hot Air Fight Only. Portland, Ore., Jan. 31.—With the announcement that Henry Berry, owner of the San Francisco Seals, has practically decided to oppose the increased salary limit for Pacific Coast league clubs, the quarrel between Berry and Walter McCredie has subsided today except for some personal bitterness.

McCredie will not attend the San Francisco meeting of the magnates Tuesday, he said.

Will Not Come Out. Oakland, Cal., Jan. 31.—Reports that "Jap" Barbeau, infielder recently purchased from Milwaukee by Manager Elliott of the Oaks, will refuse to play this far west reached here today in dispatches from Milwaukee.

Girl's Parents Stand by Minister She Accuses

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 31.—Branded by 15 year old Gertrude Lamson as her betrayer, Rev. Madison Slaughter, pastor of the First Baptist church, found today he has not only the support of the girl's parents, but likewise of the majority of his parishioners, in a fight to clear his name.

Meantime, he will not occupy his pulpit, but intends to carry on a campaign in an effort to prove his contentions that he is the victim of a "frame up" by liquor interests.

Slaughter yesterday was the center of a dramatic episode when, refusing to occupy his pulpit, he made an impassioned speech from the floor of his church, denying the charges against him made to the grand jury. The Lamson girl's parents sided with him in speeches to the congregation.

Slaughter maintains that the charges are part of a systematic campaign liquor interests have made against him for several years.

SALEM EXPECTED IN LEAGUE

Another letter has been received by City Baseball League officials from John D. Turner, the Salem, Ore., attorney, who is visiting in Gregg, Pa. Mr. Turner expects to be back in Oregon before the baseball season starts.

He is extremely eager to have his city represented in the league and as Salem and McMinnville both drew large crowds last summer, it would not be a surprise to him to see both of these cities taken in the circuit. Turner wants the schedule arranged so that there will be a team in Salem every Sunday with them taking a trip to McMinnville and Portland occasionally. He feels sure that the Capital City would enjoy good attendance all season.

Turner advocates a rule to prohibit the playing in the league of ballplayers under contract to any league with a rating higher than D. He expects to use the same class of players which composed the Senators last season. Salem had a team consisting of home boys alone and were kind to meet. Turner adds in his letter, that he will abide by anything that the directors of the city circuit decide to do.

The City League meeting will be held tomorrow night at 301 Fenelon building.—Portland Oregonian.

PROHIBITION CAUSES TROUBLE IN SEATTLE

Minister Who Is Member of Raided Club Attacks Sheriff From Pulpit

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 31.—"The solicitude of Rev. Dr. Matthews for the protection of the homes against raids of the sheriff for liquor violations is probably not unshared with his membership in the Rainier club which I raided recently," said Sheriff Bob Hodge here today in reply to criticism made by Dr. Matthews in a sermon last night.

"The breweries and liquor interests," declared Dr. M. A. Matthews, former moderator of the Presbyterian church of America, and pastor here of the First Presbyterian church, "are backing the present campaign of Sheriff Hodge in raiding private residences. It is done to make the prohibition law odious rather than from a desire to enforce it."

Dr. Matthews is a member of the Rainier club, the most exclusive club in the city, which was the first to be raided by Hodge, and a big quantity of booze taken from the linen room. Then followed Hodge's raids on the homes of D. E. Skinner and William Boeing, millionaires, where he seized liquors valued at $8,000.

In an affidavit filed in Justice Brinker's court, Boeing declared that Hodge failed to account for all the liquors seized. Replying to this charge, Hodge has a suit on file today against Boeing, asking $100,000 damages for slander.

He Refused to Wink for the Price Offered

Rev. Carl H. Elliott spoke Sunday morning to his junior congregation in the First Presbyterian church on the text found in Micah 6:8. "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love kindness and to walk humbly with thy God?" He told the boys and girls that he wanted to emphasize this message especially the part "doing justly." This means doing honestly, being fair and square always. The finest example of honesty that had come under his notice recently, the minister said was a man who represented a big corporation and was approached by a man representing another big firm. The latter said to him, "You can be a rich man by simply winking your eye if your firm is going to purchase a certain railroad tomorrow. You need not say a word and you can afterward say truthfully that you never told a soul. Simply wink and we will give you $100,000." The man refused to wink. His firm bought the railroad as he knew it intended to do and the next day the man who tried to bribe him met him and said, "You ought have been a rich man if you had winked." To which the other man replied, "Yes, but I would have sold my soul." He was an honest man.

As a boy he doubtless played fair on the school ground, was square at recreation and in examination and everywhere respected the property and personal rights of the other fellows.

RUN OF BAD LUCK

Suffering from spinal trouble S. A. Adams, who has been living just west of the city limits of Silverton for some time, was taken to the Salem hospital Monday by Dr. Wightman where he underwent a surgical operation. It is said his condition is serious and physicians believe that the operation can afford only temporary relief. His death it is said, is only a matter of a short time.

The Adams family have been very unfortunate of late. About one year ago they met with the loss of their home by fire. Some little time after that Mrs. Adams was a victim of a runaway accident in which she fractured one of her limbs. Subsequently Mr. Adams was taken sick and has been unable to work for several months. Mrs. Adams is now sick in bed and it is said she is in need of comfort of life. Neighbors have been very kind to the unfortunate people, but there is said to be need of more assistance.—Silverton Tribune.

Dr. J. N. Smith to Speak on Feeble-Minded Problem

Dr. J. N. Smith of the State Institution for the Feeble-minded will speak next Friday evening, February 3rd, on the "Problem of the Feeble-minded." This is the next lecture on the public library lecture course and will be delivered at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the library.

The almanac gives some interesting statistics in regard to the feeble-minded. It says: "The number of feeble-minded in institutions on January 1, 1910, was 20,711, on January 1, 1905, the number was 15,315. The total number of feeble-minded in the United States has been estimated at not less than 150,000. Of the feeble-minded in institutions 47.2 per cent were under 20 years of age, and 70.4 per cent were under 30 years of age."

The care of the feeble-minded and measures which may prevent feeble-mindedness are subjects which deserve the careful consideration of every taxpayer.

It has been shown that feeble-minded persons under proper supervision can be in some cases, self supporting, but that as soon as supervision is removed they revert to their old habits and inherited tendencies. Should feeble-minded persons be required to stay in an institution with proper care and supervision, or should they be allowed a choice in the matter? This is one of the questions Dr. Smith will discuss in his lecture, Friday evening, February 3.

At 2 a. m. the thermometer at Montevia dropped to 28, and smudging was started in the Richardson grove. At midnight the Covina mercury hit 28 and smudging was begun by orange growers. The smudges had been smoking busily in the moon groves since earlier in the night.
