The New York republican platform is a remarkably strong one, it indorsing about everything the Wilson administration stands for. It stands for preparedness; demands the United States insist on observance of the principles and rules of international law; demands the protection of Americans in Mexico either by a responsible government or by co-operation with other American church republics; demands a tariff commission and measures for Tuesday getting names to his petition the quick upbuilding of an American merchant marine for placing his name on the nominating and advocates farm credits. All these things President Wilson has been striving for, and about the only thing suggested in the plataform that differs from what the and they are wondrous good. They'd democrats are trying to do is the plank against the giving of independence to the Filipinos; and this the democrats are not disposed to grant at least in the near future. Taken all in all it is a splendid platform, but is stolen bodily from the democratic program.
