The federal statute provides that any injured employe of an interstate cor-poration or the heirs of the injured party may bring an action for damages f the employe was injured while in the employ of the corporation. It has long been the rule of the courts that an employe going to or from his work is considered to be in the actual employ of the company. A question was brought up in the court as to whether or not Oluf Olson Stool was going over to the Turner store on a personal errand. He came to the tool house on the morning of the injury and left his dinner bucket and was walking down the track when the work train on the side track struck him with fatal results.

Attorney George G. Bingham said aftor the verdict was rendered that it was a foregone conclusion that the case would be carried to the higher courts regardless of the outcome for the purregardless of the outcome for the purpose of securing the interpretation of the supreme court upon a number of the questions involved which must be zettled for future guidance.
