But you never know what you are except that it has a slit between the will do next, and it is my theory that when you find yourself standing still shakes it, when you are not looking, and don't know what to do, it is wise but you know it all righty. Of course I know what people say when you change your religion or your distort, and I'm sorry to lose my medical friends and my drug. But if you step into a hole when you are expecting to do so, you don't get the beneficial shock and surprise that to the humps on your back hone. It's comes from blindly staggering into it. That is the objection to the gopher hole treatment, but, take it from me, Cairo practic will surprise you. You first go in and take off things—oh, quite a lot—almost as if you were getting ready for a prize fight or a party, and then you put on a kimona. It is just like

My first 'adjustment' was when I stepped in a gopber hele at Lake Labish and folded myself up like I lack kalte. There is no use going into the harrowing details of how my bones creaked, and cruached and cruached but the result mentally was very satisfactory. For instance I cently remember afterward that November has 30 days, that it takes three yards to make a wais understanding the sun goes north or south in the wing it is, but it is one or the other), and by these signs and tokens I knew that if I could step into a series of gopher holes, I should develop into a spring poet or something really worth while.

But if you step into a hole when you are not understanding, but you should be been and other things too deep for your understanding, but you are not understanding.
