Holy Land Street Scenes To Be Presented in Salem

Twenty thousand square feet devoted entirely to the presentation of religion, education and social service themes made up of two car loads of material will make up the religious and social service exposition which will be brought to Salem for a week beginning March 20, and will continue six days. The armory is not large enough to house this great exhibit. It will therefore be shown in Ryan's hall, as the floor space there is so much larger. The exhibits comprise those shown in the Palace of Education at the Panama-Pacific exposition and are being taken over the country under the direction of the Federal Council of Churches with headquarters in New York City.

G. B. St. John for several years in charge of the sociological work of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian church and personal representative of the Federal Council is in charge. He was at the head of the religious exhibits at the exposition in San Francisco, where it was awarded two grand prizes and nearly forty other awards, the largest number taken by any one group of exhibits on the grounds.

Included in it are graphic representations of the work of 50 denominations including Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Christians, Methodist South, Brethren, Reformed church and many others. There are also a great number of social agencies including the National W. C. T. U., the National Child Labor committee, the Anti-Saloon league, the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America. There are included also, the exhibits of the greatest interdenominational religious agencies of this country such as the American Bible society, the American Tract society, the Lord's Day society, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago and many others of nation-wide importance.

One entire division will be given over to a reproduction of the holy land with more than 100 persons participating. A number of streets of Jerusalem will be shown with water carriers and peddlers, a realistic ceremony enacted in Moslem costume and the different phases making up the life of the modern resident of Palestine will be depicted.

Among the costumes shown will be the one which required 15 years to make, the garb that was worn in David's time and in other periods of Biblical history as in the days of Abraham. The events portrayed will include the life of the shepherd, the Moslem market place, the homes of the poor and of the wealthy classes and child life.

Another division will be devoted entirely to social service work and matters of interest to club women. Moving pictures of such work will be shown giving in real form some of the great uplift work being carried on in some of our great cities throughout this country. Mary Agnes Best will tell her wonderful East Side stories of "How the Other Half Live." Mollie Best as she is called, knows more of the lower East Side of New York than almost any other woman in America. She is a writer on the American Magazine staff and her stories in the language of the people are most interesting and telling in every way.

Still another division will be given over to the question of scientific temperance. Here demonstrations will be made to show the effects of alcohol and Miss Edith M. Wills, the noted lecturer from Boston, will discuss the fight for prohibition and the importance of combating the liquor habit.

This great exhibit is on a tour of this country. This will be its fourth city. It was thought best to exhibit in cities having not less than 100,000 population. The exhibit was in Portland and so anxious were the ministers of Salem to have this exposition visit Salem that they agreed to give up all church work during the week of the exposition. They feel that it is indeed a splendid chance for them to show the people of this city what the great boards and religious and social service agencies of this country are doing.

Placing an embargo on dried fruits in under discussion by Great Britain, according to information received from Senator Chamberlain. Such an embargo would seriously effect the business interests of the Pacific coast and the Portland Chamber of Commerce has asked the cooperation of the Salem Commercial club in entering a vigorous protest to the Oregon delegation in congress. California interests are also at stake and the commercial clubs of the state are also taking action urging their congressmen to enter a strong protest.

The boys of the senior class of the senior high school deem it disrespectful for any of the boys of the lower classes to wear corduroy pants, or rather trousers, as this distinguishing mode of dress has been adopted as a sort of a class emblem and a means whereby one senior may know another in the day time as well as in the dark. Hence the class has appointed a committee to inform the younger generation of school boys that they may wear any kind of pants they prefer, just so it is not corduroy.

In the country. In many cities censors have not allowed it to be shown, while in other cities it has received the commendation of ministers and societies working for the good of the community. Extracts from the book were read and discussed at a Sunday evening service of the Unitarian church of this city last fall. During the world's fair at San Francisco, it was shown for only three weeks and in order that all might have an opportunity of seeing it, the film was run not only all day but during the entire night.

A theological student of Kimball college was run into last evening about 8 o'clock by a taxi and strange to relate, the taxi got the worst of it, although running at a pretty fair speed. After the collision, it was found that the taxi suffered a broken radiator and headlight and smashed windshield. The theological student, received a slight cut on the head and several bruises on the hip. On account of the moisture on the windshield, the driver of the taxi could see but a few feet ahead of him and ran into the student at Couch and State streets. Stanley Van Winick, who was run into and who also smashed up the front of the taxi lives at Albany and left for his home this morning for a few days' rest.

Reserved seats 25 cents. A small price for a fine concert at the Grand, March 10, by the Salem Festival Chorus.
