ASTORIA CASES HELD UP
Washington, April 1--The inter-state commerce commission today postponed, on recommendation of Commissioner Harlan, the order issued in the Astoria rate case. The order was to have been effective May 1. Announcing the postponement, the commission said that the railroads involved had asked for a rehearing, but that their petition had been delayed. Holding up of the order will continue pending the rehearing of the petition.

DIED
MAYO--At his home four miles north of Salem, at Kaiser Bottom, March 31, 1916, Frank J. Mayo, in his 68th year. Besides his widow, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. B. McKnight, of Kaiser Bottom, and a son, Walter Mayo, of Rapid City, S. D. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Sunday at the home, Rev. Yarbrough of the Methodist church, officiating. The body will be forwarded to Hawk-eye, Iowa, for burial.

The tactical walk of Company 14 tomorrow afternoon will start at the armory with a ride in autos to the point in Polk county where the things that a soldier should know will be put in practice. Rev. T. P. Ford, district superintendent of the Methodist church, will dress the official members of Salem Methodist at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the First Methodist church. Members and friends of the church are welcome.

"Custer's Last Battle" is the subject of an address to be delivered next Wednesday evening at Ryan's hall by R. M. Read. The proceeds of the lecture will go to the building fund of the United Evangelical church of Salem.

Exactly 3,877 people paid admission to see Billie Burke in "Peggy" during the three day run at the Oregon this week. This is perhaps the largest attendance for any single attraction shown in the city.

The Capital Journal is in receipt of a forest cover map of Oregon. A limited number of these maps were printed for distribution to the public schools. The map shows in detail the exact acreage of forest land in the state and also notes a few things about building fires in the forest, one of which is the fact that it is unlawful to build a fire against a tree, stump or log. The map was drawn in the office of E. A. Elliott, state forester. It is not for general distribution, but can be purchased for $5.

Another Salem product will be exploited through the country to spread the fame of the Willamette valley. Pheas, made from loganberries and destined to rival grape juice as a thirst quencher, will be advertised by a series of humorous posters of unassuming merit. The original drawings of these posters have been displayed in the shop windows about town the past week and have attracted considerable attention. The artist is Mr. Howard Fisher of Portland, who has won fame as a sculptor as well as a designer having modeled the group "Say please" in butter which was seen at the last state fair.

Jacob Fuhrer, messenger for the Ladd & Bush fund, was initiated today into the mysteries of an old fashioned April fool's day. It was worked about as follows: He was given a check on the U. S. National where he was informed the party had no funds, but was notified that probably the account was with the savings department. The savings department teller passed the check up to the stenographer who was of the opinion the account was intended for the Capital National. With hope deferred, the messenger again presented the check for payment and upon being turned over again, made a close study of the signature and found the check was signed by E. Z. Mark.

Now that the stocks of drinking materials laid in before the state went dry are running low, the shipments of liquor into the state are gradually increasing. During the month of March, 411 people made affidavit to the effect that they were entitled to legally receive the two quarts allowed every four weeks. While the March shipments amounted to 822 quarts, this was considerable of an increase over February's record of 502 quarts.

Leslie Stiffer, who has held the position of assistant manager of the Woolworth store, has accepted a position with the Woolworth store at Bellingham, Wash. He has been with the Woolworth store in Salem four years and will go with the Bellingham store as assistant manager.

The month of March may be considered a pretty rainy month, as the official records show that the total rainfall was 10.06 inches. For the month of March, one year ago, the rainfall was only 4.90 inches. Although there was over 10 inches of rain, it came along so gradual and spread out over so many days that the highest record for the river during the month was 17.5 above low water. This high record was on the 27th. The lowest stage for the month was March 12, five feet above low water.

The first gun will be fired next Monday evening at the commercial club as to what policy the club will pursue and what may be expected of the club for the coming year, by the election of a successor to E. G. Deeksbach, director of the tourist and publicity department. Only those affiliated with this department will be allowed to vote. As yet, no one has announced, and everything seems quiet. In fact, the only positive announcement that has been made is that of the president of the club, W. M. Hamilton, and he says he has served his time and will not come up for reelection.

The declamatory contest last evening at the university chapel, under the direction of Helen Miller Senn, proved to be quite a drawing card and also showed the interest of the Salem people in the work of this department. James Ewing of Pendleton, a freshman, was awarded the first prize by the judges, but did not fare quite so well when the popular vote was taken. The second prize was won by Faye Bellin of Salem, and third prize by Margaret Garrison of Salem. When the popular vote was taken, it was found to be a tie between Miss Garrison and Miss Bellin, and this prize, given by Mrs. Senn, was divided between the two young ladies.

Recognition services for the new pastor, George F. Holt, will be held at the First Baptist church next Tuesday evening. The program as already arranged includes greeting from the northwest by the Rev. A. M. Petty of Portland; greetings from the state by Thos. B. Kay; greetings from the city by Mayor Harley O. White; greetings from the Ministerial union, by the Rev. F. T. Porter and greetings from the church by Deacon Albert Copley. The services of the evening will be preached by Dr. Petty. After the informal social program, there will be an informal social in order that all may have an opportunity of meeting the new pastor. Refreshments will be served by the ladies of the church.
