OUTLOOK FOR FRUIT CROP BETTER NOW THAT STORM IS OVER

Salem Prune Crop and Cherry Crop Promises Good Yield Says Paulus

As a cheering aftermath of the dispatch from Idaho that the prune crop in that state has suffered $1,000,000 damages from the recent storm, Robert C. Paulus, of the Salem Fruit Union, states that the prune crop in this district has not been injured in the least by the storm and that the prunes look better than they did two weeks ago and that all indications point to a larger crop than at that time.

Mr. Paulus made a trip over the prune growing section of this county today and brings back the report that the prunes have weathered the storm in good shape and that if warm weather follows the recent cold snap that the Willamette valley will have a fair yield, not an enormous yield but a fair yield.

The prune orchards are reported as "spotted" and that some parts of the orchards have prunes thickly set on while other parts of the same orchard have scarcely any green fruit set on. The damage to the Idaho fruit crop will not be directly felt in this section in dried fruit prices as Idaho is a green fruit shipping district. If however, the Idaho growers cannot supply the demand for green prunes from Mississippi river points and farther east, they will buy green fruit from Oregon and the Willamette valley. The Salem Fruit Union expects to ship out some green fruit to help make up the shortage of Idaho fruit.

Mr. Paulus returned yesterday from a trip to The Dalles and Hood River where he looked over the cherry crop in that district. He says the orchards are "spotted" in this district also and that some orchards will return the heaviest yield in the history of the section, while the orchard just across the fence will produce but very little fruit. The cherry crop about The Dalles is well sold and the Hood River cherry crop is sold out. The Yakima section is reported to be short on cherries this year.

Mr. Paulus reports that the Salem cherry crop will be about the same as in 1913 and will probably be better than in 1914 and 1915.

THE PIONEERS OF CHAMPOEG.

(Medford Mail Tribune)

Pioneers of Oregon Saturday celebrated at Champeog the anniversary of the birth of the first commonwealth on the Pacific coast, known as the "Oregon Territory." At Champeog, on the banks of the Willamette, fifty-two men organized May 6, 1843, the first provisional government for the territory now comprising the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

At that time there were fewer than one hundred native Americans in the whole country west of the Rockies. Possession was still in dispute between Great Britain and the United States, and remained so until 1846. These early settlers manifested the racial instinct for government of and by the people, which is still a feature of Oregon. To the efforts of these pioneers the northwest was preserved to the Union.

All of Oregon owes a great debt to the pioneers—not only to those of the Champeog gathering, but also to those who came later. The pioneers who settled southern Oregon were a hardy, enterprising, forceful body of men and women, and to their efforts is due the subsequent development that their sacrifices and struggles made possible. Few of the succeeding waves of immigration have added as fine a citizenship as shown by the first arrivals, and few have done more for the upbuilding of the state and nation. All honor to the pioneers, whose numbers grow pathetically fewer with each ensuing year.

BACK TO THE FARM GOES THE NEW FOURTH READER

Sacramento, Cal., May 11.—Because the joys of cow milking, egg harvesting and other pastoral delights were slighted in the new fourth reader, in the opinion of country teachers, the state board of education today decided to add 50 pages to the book, dealing exclusively with life down on the farm.

Did you ever see a woman evolve from a calico mother-hubbard into the most splendidly attired of social leaders? Did you ever see a home-loving body go through the various stages of truly help-mate to a money-making husband who twisted and turned and made over every garment a dozen times, become the best gowned woman among the social elite? If you have never witnessed this evolution, then don't fail to see May Robson at the Grand theatre Tuesday, May 23, as "Mrs. Matt" from the middle west (Omaha) go into the metropolis and capture the leadership in society's realm. Of course the proper wearing of the latest up-to-the-minute of the dressmaker's and modistes' creations aid in the consummation of this revolution.

Hazel Dawn Starred by Famous Players in Film

"One yard! Yes, that blue matches all right!" The voice is that of Hazel Dawn, the celebrated Famous Players star, who actually went behind the ribbon counter of one of the far-famed department stores of New York to obtain the proper atmosphere and settings for her next Paramount picture, "The Salestady," which is the attraction at the Ye Liberty for Friday and Saturday. Hazel Dawn has done many interesting and captivating impersonations on the screen but nothing which approaches in sympathetic interest Helen Shirley, the country lass whom poverty forces into New York in search of a living.

Shy and unsophisticated, Helen falls an easy victim of the notorious band which preys upon young girls and she is easily induced to go to a boarding house which is in reality the headquarters of the gang. Failing to find employment, she declares to give violin lessons and while practicing, she hears the agonized cough of a girl in the next room. Investigating, she discovers that the girl is in the last stages of tuberculosis and that only instant removal to the mountains will save her. Moved by compassion, Helen impulsively sells the beautiful dog which is her only source of amusement and contrives to set the girl on the path to recovery.

Practically penniless as the result of her kindness, Helen is ejected from her room but young Bruce Kerwin, a wealthy New Yorker, who has been attracted by her beauty, learns of her plight and induces one of the other girls in the house to "loan" Helen some money.

Through the efforts of Bruce, a mounted policeman and his sweetheart, the girl obtains employment in a department store where the advances of a floorwalker annoy her. When she refuses him, he contrives to have her discharged, but when she tells her story to the matron, she is taken to the manager and reinstated.

The floorwalker, finding that Helen and young Bruce are going together, informs the boy's father that he is interested in a shop girl. In the row which follows between father and son, Bruce leaves his home and then marries Helen. Soon after, he is injured and Helen decides to try her luck on the stage. She is a tremendous success and scores a great hit, captivating, among others, the elder Kerwin, who does not suspect that she is his daughter-in-law. The old gentleman meets Helen—she, of course, is aware of his identity—and the girl admitsly wins his heart before revealing her identity.
