VILLA ATTACKS GIRL SHOT BY HER BROTHER

Bandits Beat Boy to Death at Villa's Command—This Is "True" Story

By H. D. Jacobs
(United Press staff correspondent)
Field Headquarters American Expedition Near Nampiqui, Mexico, May 4 (via motor truck to Columbus, N. M.)—May 15.—Rancho Villa was shot by the youthful brother of a girl he attempted to assault, according to the latest version of the wounding of the bandit. A former Villista officer told the story here today, asserting the details came from the girl's family and neighbors.

The boy was beaten to death by Villa's men at the bandit leaders command to "kill him."
Villa had long maintained his respect for women. Many stories are told in Mexico of officers executed by the bandit because they attacked young girls.

Villa forfeited this redeeming virtue, however, while marching to attack Columbus, when he kidnapped the 12 year old daughter of Juan Ulderite, foreman of a big ranch at Bachineva. The girl was carried away to San Geronimo and kept a prisoner for nearly a week. She was in a serious condition when Villa released her and again moved northward with his column. Her father, who killed Jose Guierrez, has sworn to devote the remainder of his life to hunting Villa down.

Retreating from Columbus Villa and his band arrived at Guerrero on the morning of March 28, according to the story told here. When his headquarters were settled, Villa rode through the city, appraising the women he saw. As he passed the home of Arrieta family he espied Carmita, aged 15, standing near the door. Villa slid from his horse and grasped the girl around the waist, smothering her shrieks with kisses. The girl's brother, a youth of 18, rushed at the bandit. Villa released the girl, but too late; the boy shot from the hip, hitting Villa in the right leg, just above the ankle and in the right thigh. Two more bullets whizzed harmlessly past the bandit's head. Then, as the girl fled to her mother, the youth threw the smoking weapon in Villa's face and fled.

Villa crumpled, but pulled himself together and mounted his horse. The boy ran into the arms of a Villista guard and was promptly brought back to the bandit chief.

"Kill him!" was Villa's command, and he rode away confident of his soldiers' ingenuity in devising a means of execution. Carmita's brother was stoned until he fell.

Then the guard fell upon him and beat him to death with swords and gun butts. Before the eyes of his mother and sister whom he had saved, the lad was brutally slain, but the family was not molested further.

Villa, incapacitated by the wounds, left for the south, and was said to have been far away when the Carranzistas fought their battle next day. The narrator of the story did not know whether Villa died of his wounds.

JACK BARRYMORE SMASHES PRECEDENT
Famous Player Star Plays Crook in "The Lost Bridgroom," a Series of Comic Film

The incomparable Jack Barrymore has played many roles on the screen including prince, dictator, gentleman of extremely elegant leisure and other interesting types but he has never before played a crook. This remarkable characterization he has reserved for his latest Famous Players-Paramount picture "The Lost Bridgroom" which is the attraction at the Ye Liberty, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, during the coming week. Of course Barrymore is not a bona fide crook in the picture. He has been hit on the head by two thugs while returning from his bachelor dinner on the eve of his wedding to Dorothy Hardin, and has completely lost his memory as a result of the blow.

After falling off a dock upon which he elects to take an impromptu nap, Bertie—for that is the alias under which Barrymore travels in this film—stumbles into a saloon which is the headquarters for an assorted gang of thieves, holdup experts and card sharps. Bertie's entrance into this hitherto unexplored stratum of society is nothing if not picturesque. His assailants stole his overcoat, dress coat and waistcoat, but left his top hat. So our hero enters the saloon clad in dress trousers, the upper portion of his B. V. D.s and his top hat, carrying his white shirt to dry it after his fall into the river.

The habitues of the saloon see great possibilities in Bertie as a gentleman burglar and they assign him to the job of burgling his own fiancée's home without in the least suspecting his identity. When Bertie and his pals reach the Hardin home things begin to happen with startling rapidity. Even more startling than the rapidity, however, is the concrete incident in which Bertie and one of the burglars, locked in a death grip, plunge down a flight of

Terribly Mangled In Automobile Accident

Santa Rosa, Cal., May 15.—His lower jaw almost ripped away, A. E. Briggs of Healdsburg was in a precarious condition in the hospital today, following an automobile accident on the state highway near San Rafael.

With Conway Hall, Briggs was speeding to catch a train at San Rafael when he suddenly came upon a drove of horses in the road. His efforts to swerve the car and dodge the horses resulted in his being hurled from his seat headlong into a barbed wire fence. One of the jagged strands cut through his cheek, gashed his throat from ear to ear and became entangled in the muscles of his face and neck so he was left hanging on the fence until the wire was snapped. After the wire had been taken from his jaw 37 stitches were necessary to sew up his wounds.

Bond Holders Failed to Take Case from Judge

San Francisco, May 15.—Efforts to oust Federal Judge Van Fleet from presiding over the legal proceedings incident to the sale of the Western Pacific railway failed today when the United States court of appeals refused to make Van Fleet certify to a judge of the appellate court an affidavit which sought to disqualify him, alleging prejudice. This is considered a victory for the minority bondholders.

The decision means Judge Van Fleet will preside over the foreclosure proceedings and that the system will be sold to the bondholders for $40,000,000 instead of $17,000,000, which the majority bondholders wanted to pay.

Waite's skull was fractured. Miss Esther Waite and Mrs. Ida Bennett, daughters, both suffered broken legs and Miss Bennett will probably die. Allen Bennett, Mrs. Bennett's son, aged 12, suffered a broken leg but will recover.

Julius Wolf has advanced the idea of starting a movement in Silverton to raise the necessary money to build a monument to mark the grave of Homer Davenport.

A number of prominent men of the country stand ready to donate liberally to this cause when the matter is put in shape.

Now that the movement is started again let us keep it going.—Silverton Appeal.

Glee Clubs Wednesday at First M. E. Church

The combined glee clubs of the university will appear in concert on the evening of May 17, which is Wednesday evening, at the First M. E. church. This will be the first time that they have done so for the past five years. It having been customary to take a trip to some part of the state during the spring vacation, this year Manager Paul R. Smith decided that instead of taking a trip the glee clubs should appear in Salem, consequently arrangements were made for them to appear in the First church. This will give Salem people an opportunity to hear and appreciate the worth of the local musical talent. The club contains a number of members who are making music their specialty, and under the instruction of Dr. Frank W. Chase, who has charge of the music department at Willamette they are becoming artists in their line. Readings of dramatic and humorous na-
