DRAINAGE MUDDLE REFERRED BACK TO ITS OWN LOCALITY

Actual Conditions Not Clear From Exhibits in Supreme Court

A controversy over a drainage district which was argued in the supreme court over five months ago was finally referred back to its own locality for settlement according to an opinion handed down by Justice Benson in the case of the state of Oregon on relation of W. H. Brooks, district attorney, appellant, against Nyssa-Arcadia drainage district, a proceeding to test the validity of the drainage law which was appealed from the rulings of Judge Biagg of Malheur county. Justice Benson affirmed the judgment of the lower court but held that from the transcript of the evidence it was evident that the controversy should be settled in the locality where all of the points could be cleared up by a comparison of the evidence with the actual conditions as they then existed.
