TEDDY POINTS

of abstract thought. They may be taken out of the world of cloudy promise and vague phrasing from before you and your fellows for your decision. For two years, in the face of awful world cataclysm, this nation has stood spine and helpless and has not in the smallest degree prepared itself to ward off the danger. No promise, no excuse now made by those responsible for this inaction is entitled to consideration. It is for you and your assistants to show the people that they have a worthy alternative to which to turn.

"The professional German-Americans, acting through various agencies, including so-called German-American alliances, are at this moment serving notice on the members of your convention that your action must be taken with a view to the interest, not of the United States, but of Germany, and of that section of the German vote, which is anti-American to the core.

Hot Roast for Germans.

"I believe with all my heart that the fellows of these sinister German-Americans will be repudiated with contempt by the great mass of our fellow citizens who are in whole or in part of German blood, and who are, as we all know, unsurpassed in rugged and wholesome Americanism by other citizens of our land.

"But the professional German-Americans are seeking to ferretize your convention, for they wish to elect next November a man who shall not be in good faith for the American president, but the viceroy of a foreign government. It is for your convention in emphatic fashion to repudiate them. This can be done in effective manner only if such action is taken as to enable the republicans, progressives, democrats, who are true to the principles of Andrew Jackson—and in short, all Americans—to join in the effort to reach the goal we all have in view.

"Can we not, forget past differences, now, join for the safety and honor of our country to enforce the policies of genuine Americanism and genuine progressiveness. Surely, we can afford to act in accordance with the words of Abraham Lincoln, when he said, 'May all having a common interest, reunite in common effort to save our common country. May we ask those who have not differed with us to join in the same spirit toward those who have?'"

"As far as my own soul is known to me, it is in this same spirit that at this time I make my appeal to the republicans and progressives assembled at Chicago. Signed "THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

No Invitation Extended.

Chicago, Ill., June 8.—Shown Theodore Roosevelt's statement by a representative of the United Press, Chairman Harding only smiled, and declined to comment.

A moment later, asked if the colonel would be tendered an invitation, he said: "I cannot say."

Harding passed the United Press bulletin back to members of the national committee, while reading the full text himself with interest. Later, he handed this back to National Chairman Hillis who took it with him to the back of the platform. There a number of national committee men clustered around him as he perused it.

Governor Whitman, Hughes' broker, only smiled at the colonel's statement.

After having read the Roosevelt message, Harding in response to an inquiry handed the following statement to the United Press:

"Colonel Roosevelt is always interesting and a leading American, but the chairman has no authority to invite and recognize him as a speaker except on order of the convention."

"There is no move to invite him," commented Secretary Reynolds of the national committee.

full, considerably better attendance than yesterday. The delegates were also very much more perky in spirit. The conversation was more enthusiastic, there was more of it, the hand played more lively airs, and there were more women in the galleries. It was raining just as dimly outside as it did yesterday but there was a noticeable change today from the apathy which seemed in the air yesterday.

Split the "Rock of Ages."

The hand swung into the "Star Spangled Banner" at 11:21 and this evoked polite burst of applause after the vast audience had stood throughout the playing of the anthem. By this time, practically all seats were occupied except several hundred in the galleries. It was exactly 11:22 when Senator Harding's gavel fell.

Monsignor Francis C. Kelley offered prayer. He reverently prayed for deliberations of the convention.

"Bless every motive and thought of ours that is done with the idea of pleasing thee," he concluded.

At the close of the prayer, the hand swung a new stunt, softly turning into the strains of "Rock of Ages."

They were cut right short in the middle of the first verse, however, by a telephone message from Chairman Harding. The effect was weird.

Chairman Harding then inquired if the credentials committee was ready to report. Senator Smoot approved and so reported, being given a round of applause as he appeared under the sounding board.

Senator E. Borah, of Idaho. He drew a big ovation. Borah emphasized the need that the party stand strong on the point of national honor. He said that the party ought never to take the "shameless paths of expediency."

America has been generous, the senator declared, in extending citizenship. "In any contest involving the dignity and honor of this republic, these new citizens would stand for America to the last," he declared.

"We do not doubt them and the republican party doesn't want to take any position that they are traitors or that we are traitors."

"Make our position strong for America, and those who love America best will be with us. The others we don't want."

There is room under the republican banner for every loyal citizen, regardless of the place of his birth or his ancestors. We believe in a great national policy.

"We are prepared to speak for humanity. We are prepared to pledge ourselves to the full protection of American citizens—not only because it is the thing to do, but because it is a guarantee of peace. A vacillating foreign policy invites attack. A nation which regards itself as 'too proud to fight' will soon be regarded by other nations as too cowardly to fight."

Borah attacked Wilson's Mexican policy.

"A nation whose policy excites contempt will soon excite a more substantial form of punishment," he asserted.

At the close of Borah's speech, the convention recessed, at 1:31 o'clock until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Jack Barrymore found his part in "The Red Widow" to be a very nervous one. With the war agitation and federal investigation of the various bomb plots which are now rife, he was somewhat diffident about appearing in public carrying even "prop" bombs. But Hannibal Butts, the distinguished co-set salesman, colluded by Barrymore in this Paramount picture, was forced by the Russian conspirators—and his director—to carry a varied assortment of bombs about his person. The Famous Players comedian now quakes audibly every time any heavily mustached, gunshod individual of very evident Siberian ancestors happens to stare fixedly at him. This picture will be at the Ye Liberty theatre Friday and Saturday.

ing an unlighted cigar into his left hand and dropping the other arm over the guard's shoulder, "my face ought to be my badge, but—" and at this moment 75 delegates from Illinois, Indiana and elsewhere, ran over, steam rolled the guard and brought Cannon along while those who had amusedly watched the scene applauded.

By 11:10 a. m. the hall was almost

A Timely Warning

ELEVEN well-known automobiles have advanced in price within the last ninety days.

The Maxwell Company has not increased their prices. We do not know what their plans are, but we do know and you know that materials entering into the construction of good automobiles now cost from 20 to 300 per cent more than they did six months ago.

Nothing is to be gained by delay. Much may be lost.

Not only may you lose several dollars in the purchase price, but you are sacrificing the enjoyment, the relaxation, the health-giving properties—everything, in fact, that makes motoring the favorite pastime of the nation.

We urge you to come in and investigate the Maxwell.

Or, we will refer you to any number of Maxwell owners and let them tell you their own story in their own way.

They will tell you what they have told us. That the Maxwell is good-looking—that it is powerful—that it is comfortable—that it is economical—in short, that it is the best investment they ever made. They will tell you more and they will tell you gladly and freely.

That's the way they feel toward us and the Maxwell Car.

Whatever you do, don't put this off. We have a few cars on hand and can take orders for immediate or future delivery—at present prices. If you can't come in today, phone us for a Maxwell demonstration.

Time Payments if Desired

It was noon when Chairman Warren of Michigan, of the rules committee came on the platform with his report. He read the long formal report, outlining the rules of the 1908 convention and adopted as the rules of the present convention, while the audience sat politely quiet.

The rules committee's report was adopted.

DePew Tells Two Ford Jokes.

Chauncey M. DePew then addressed the convention. The object was to kill time awaiting a report of the resolutions committee as well as to cut loose some good old-fashioned oratory.

Harding's introduction of the grand old republican from New York, a staunch spokesman of republicanism for more than 50 years, was received with a tremendous burst of cheers.

More than 50 years of age, DePew's voice was clear and his gestures vigorous. He drew a glowing picture of conditions of 1860 and today—declaring that Americanism was then also an issue.

He referred to President Wilson as the "professor" and repeatedly poked fun at his foreign policies.

The former senator sprang two Ford jokes and got a big laugh on both. One was:

"A Ford machine is like a bath tub—everybody wants one, and nobody wants to be seen in it."

The other was:

"I turn down to the greatest pacifist who is here near me—Mr. Bryan—for his definition of a pacifist. My idea is that they think that, if any foreign foe should attack us, a million Americans in Ford machines would meet them and drive them back."

He suggested he was an "elder statesman," like those in Japan, and intimated that if they wanted an "elder statesman" as a candidate they could have him.

Uncle Joe Issues "Defl."

Harding next called on "Uncle Joe" Cannon, and the galleries and floors yelled.

"God bless you," yelled one delegate as the grand old man of the house arose.

"I haven't been lonesome," he remarked. "I've seen a few reporters and have given them just one interview, but I've never seen it in print. It never got to the managing editors. I'll tell it to you."

"I've been asked who will be the candidate."

"I've said this is a republican convention and that it will select a republican."

The crowd caught the "old guard's" defiance to the progressives of the new day in Uncle Joe's far flung challenge, and cheered him to the echo.

"Chauncey," he yelled at DePew, "I'm coming to your 100th anniversary."

Uncle Joe spoke of the "falling out" in the republican ranks four years ago. "There'll be no more falling out, because this convention will nominate a worthy ticket and it will be elected," he declared.

Borah Got Ovation.

Chairman Harding next presented

Senator E. Borah, of Idaho. He drew a big ovation. Borah emphasized the need that the party stand strong on the point of national honor. He said that the party ought never to take the "shameless paths of expediency."

America has been generous, the senator declared, in extending citizenship. "In any contest involving the dignity and honor of this republic, these new citizens would stand for America to the last," he declared.

Borah attacked Wilson's Mexican policy.

At the close of Borah's speech, the
